VOL. XXII.....NO. 6582. NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1872. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

POLITICAL.

Progress of the Campaign in this State.

Convention of the Connecticut Straight-Out Democrats Today.

Ex-Rebel Nominations by the Greeleyites of Missouri.

Address of the Independent Democrats in Favor of Grant.

What Reconciliation Means to Kentucky Democrats.

The Prize and the Struggle.

The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser suggests that it is not unlikely that the Opposition will concentrate their forces in this State, and it says: "New-York must redeem herself and atone for the disgrace of casting her electoral vote for Seymour and Blair. Horace Greeley must be rebuked in his own State, and buried under a majority which will show him how indignant the honest voters in the party were at his attempt to sell them out to the enemy. The gallant Gen. Dix must be elected, and will be a satisfying demonstration of popular confidence in his sterling worth as a citizen, and of popular appreciation of his good and faithful and patriotic service to his country and his State. Republicans of New-York, a noble and decisive victory is within your reach! But it will not come of itself. It must be sought for and earned by unceasing, zealous and well-directed work! Are you not willing to work, to work with a will, and with your might, for the glorious cause, and under such worthy and noble standard-bearers?"

St. Lawrence County.

The active, faithful and ever triumphant Republicans of St. Lawrence promise to renew their victory at the coming election. The State of the canvass there is described by the Ogdensburg Journal as follows: "We have information that our friends in this grand old County will roll up one of her largest Republican majorities on the 5th of November. Many of the towns will make a handsome increase on the vote of 1868, when we lacked but a few votes of giving 4,000 majority for Grant. The storm of the last week, more than half of the old-line Democrats refuse to eat crow, and will either vote for Grant and Wilson, or remain away from the polls. Hundreds of Democrats openly rejoice at the result of the October elections. Many Republicans who were early in the campaign, seem to be "timed out," are now satisfied that Greeley's is the old 'lost cause' in a new shape, and will have nothing to do with it. Listen for thunder from St. Lawrence on the 5th of November."

Hon. A. B. Cornell.

The Albany Journal of Tuesday evening says: "We are very glad to see that our Republican friends are bringing forward some of their strong men for the Assembly. The nomination of Hon. A. B. Cornell, in New-York, is one eminently fit to be made. He is admirably qualified to take a leading part in legislation, and both his large executive ability and his high character constitute a guarantee that he will render most valuable service in the promotion of wholesome reforms. We heartily welcome such commendable nominations."

The Connecticut Democracy.

A call is out for a Convention of the unpurchasable Democracy of Connecticut in New-Haven, on Thursday, 24th inst., to nominate an O'Conor and Adams electoral ticket. The New-Haven Journal says that the call has been widely circulated, and it is anticipated the Convention will be largely attended. It adds: "The call, with the fact that a large number of Democrats have announced their intention to vote for Grant, is causing no little uneasiness among the New-Haven Democracy. But in addition to this there is a further source of annoyance. Hon. James Gallagher was announced in the last issue of the Saturday Evening Union as a candidate for Congress in this district. This means business, we have no doubt. We learn that Mr. Gallagher's backers have the support of the new town committee that the only way to prevent "reconciliation" for the latter to fall into the ranks and march on with Mr. Gallagher leading the column. How these terms will be received remains to be seen."

Mr. Greeley's Secession Friends.

The St. Louis Democrat describes some of the sneaking to the old secession spirit which has been exhibited by the Democracy in various parts of Missouri, and which deserves an emphatic and indignant rebuke at the hands of Republicans and Union Democrats. The Democrat says: "Col. Switzler, of the Columbia Statesman, an old-time Democrat, has very properly taken exception to the proceedings of the Democratic Convention in the Eleventh District, which nominated Gen. B. Clarke, Jr., for Congress—a man who has no apparent claims for the position save his record in the Confederate army. Manair, the Democratic candidate in the Tenth District, pandering to the same rebellious element, declared in a recent speech that he was a rebel and he never had taken the infamous oath of loyalty, and that none but the meanest Democrats had. The quick repudiation of such men by Union Democrats in a number of counties where tickets made wholly out of this element have been nominated, is complimentary in the highest degree to them and their party."

The Spirit of Reconciliation in Kentucky.

A few days ago a number of Southern visitors were in Louisville, Ky., in attendance upon the Exposition, and a banquet was tendered them. Among them was Braxton Bragg, of Alabama, and he appeared to be the lion of the occasion. He was called upon for a speech at the dinner, and in substance said that ten years ago he had attempted to get into Louisville with his army in order to deliver the people from the most tyrannical government on the face of the earth; that he rejoiced to see, now that he was here, a popular sentiment that led him to believe that he would have been welcome. These remarks called forth the applause of his listeners, and the speaker was, as it were, knee-deep in flowers. Bouquet after bouquet was thrown and handed to him, and cheer on cheer applauded the sentiment.

The Independent Democrats.

An address to independent Democrats has been issued from the Committee rooms of the Independent Democracy. The address, which is very lengthy, says that the political events of the 5th of October have determined, so far as anything can be determined in advance, the result of the November elections and the Presidential contest of 1872. Yet there is work to do to complete the political overthrow of men who make merchandise of Democracy.

The people have not forgotten the need for greater purity in the politics of the country; of fidelity and integrity among men in office; of honesty in collecting the revenue, and honor everywhere, as the sole hope and guarantee of the Republic. Above all, they know that liberty is violated, the spirit of independence corrupted, the welfare and even the very existence of the Republic assailed, whenever a traitorous and implacable foe to the party of the people, and a traitor to his own party, without a word, a deed, or a sign to show any sincere change in his sentiments and convictions, can himself up as the champion and standard-bearer of a party which he has never ceased to malign; of a party which has never ceased to regard him as its enemy.

The address concludes with an earnest appeal to honest Democrats to support Gen. Grant.

Miscellaneous Notes.

The straight-out Democrats of California have nominated an electoral ticket and issued an address favoring the election of O'Conor and Adams....Col. William M. Grosvenor has accepted the Greeleyite nomination for Congress in the First District of Missouri....The Republicans of Massachusetts have nominated an electoral ticket in favor of Black and Russell for President and Vice-President. A Democrat in the union organized recently, that he could and did support Greeley "because he was the first man to advocate good earnest authority." The election in Georgia, and recent occurrences in Louisiana, Missouri, and elsewhere, show that animosity to the word after it....The Savannah Republican positive in the belief that the taxes of the colored voters are being paid. It asserts that within the last two weeks the taxes of upward of 2,000 colored voters in that district had been paid, and that number of voters qualified for November, and that the work still goes on.

Local Nominations Last Night.

The following nominations were made last night by the various parties in this City:

The Thirteenth District Tammany Assembly Convention nominated Christopher Fine for member of Assembly. The Thirteenth District Apollo Hall Assembly Convention also nominated Christopher Fine.

The Sixteenth Assembly District Apollo Hall Convention nominated Nicholas Hamilton.

Peter Seery was nominated for Assembly by the Eighteenth District Apollo Hall Convention.

The Fourteenth Assembly District Tammany Hall American-Aldermanic Convention nominated Wm. Gleason.

The Fifth District Republican Congressional Convention nominated Matthew Stewart for Congress.

The Twelfth District Apollo Hall Assembly Convention nominated John Dinkle for Assembly.

The Ninth District Council of Political Reform nominated Wm. F. Bensel for Assistant Alderman.

The Tammany Assistant Aldermanic Convention of the Ninth District nominated Capt. Wm. F. Bensel for Assistant Alderman.

The Tammany Assistant Aldermanic Convention of the Third District nominated Frederick J. Byrne for Assistant Alderman.

APOLLO HALL NOMINATIONS.

Supreme Court, Henry H. Anderson; Superior Court, Clifford A. Hand; City Judge, Josiah Sutherland; District-Attorney, Wm. C. Whitney; Coroner, Dr. Adolph Kessler.

Aldermen—Peter Gilsey, Samuel A. Lewis, Solomon Mehrbach, Wm. Joyce, Jenkins Van Schaick, J. A. Mouhelmer, Charles A. Johns, David M. Kohler, James Fitzgerald and Frederick Germain.

The National Democracy—They Endorse Bedford for City Judge.

The Conference Committee of the National Democracy met at No. 39 Union-square, last evening, Mr. Geo. A. Barney presiding. On motion of Benjamin Wood, Gunning S. Bedford was nominated for City Judge.

Mr. Cohen said that he was in favor of the National Democrats assembling as once and nominating a straightout ticket. He was opposed to Tammany Hall. He did not like the Bar Association, because it assumed too much power. He did not like the Republican Party, because he was a Democrat; he was not prepared to indorse Apollo Hall; and he disliked the Committee of Seventy, because it represented no party, was self-appointed, and "just like a Vigilance Committee."

Mr. Wood said he was anxious to do everything in his power to heal the dissensions of Tammany Hall and Apollo Hall, and bring she two antagonists together. A close contest between O'Brien and Lawrence would elect Havemeyer. He had no doubt but that the Republicans were working with a single and earnest purpose to elect their candidate for Mayor, and he did not want to do anything to help them. The Committee then adjourned.

Brooklyn Politics.

The Republicans of the Twenty-first Ward, Brooklyn, turned out in great numbers last night to ratify the nominations of the party. The wigwam of the Twenty-first Ward Grant and Wilson Club, on Gates, near Marcy-avenue, was crowded to its utmost capacity, a fair proportion of ladies being present. The street was swelled by the accession of the Sixteenth Ward Grant and Wilson Club and the German Grant and Wilson Club of the Twenty-first Ward. The meeting was presided over by Dr. J. T. Burdick. Col. W. O. Holbrook, in a forcible speech, reviewed Gen. Grant's brilliant military career, and then passed to a scathing comment on the antecedents and present political position of Horace Greeley.

Mr. Augustus Ford next addressed the meeting. While he was speaking, the Eighteenth Ward Tammany and the Sixteenth Ward (colored) Grant and Wilson Clubs came in with music. Mr. Ford was followed by Col. L. H. Rowan and A. G. Williams.

The meeting was a very enthusiastic one, and at its adjournment gave rousing cheers for Grant, Wilson, Dix and the whole Republican ticket.

It is stated, on the authority of members of the Committee of One Hundred, that this organization will nominate independent candidates for Commissioners of Charities, in opposition to all other candidates already nominated.

Saturday, the 26th inst., will be the last day for registration for the November election in Brooklyn.

The Greeleyites of the Eighth Assembly District, it is reported, will run Hon. Geo. C. Bennett, incumbent Assembly, against Suydam (Rep.) and Blake (Dem.)

The Sixth Ward Democrats have nominated Major P. R. Hogan for Alderman.

The adherents of O'Conor and Adams rallied last night at their rooms in the Wilbie House, Mr. Crowbridge in the chair. Professor Wilcox delivered an address advocating the cause of O'Conor and Adams.

Twenty-Second Ward Republicans of Brooklyn.

The Twenty-second Ward Grant and Wilson Campaign Club held a grand mass-meeting last night at the corner of Seventh-street and Fifth-avenue. A brilliant display of fire-works and calcium lights added to the general enthusiasm. There were about 1,000 people present. F. M. Ostrander, Esq., said that the mission of the Republican Party was not accomplished till every freeman was made secure in his newly-acquired rights. He urged all present to register, and see that their friends registered on Saturday next, that they must deposit their ballot for the nominees of the Republican Party, National, State and local, on the 5th of November. The Fifteenth Ward Glee Club then sang a campaign song, after which Hon. Peter Cooper delivered an address, and the meeting closed.

General Notes.

The Republicans of Warren County have nominated Dr. James G. Porteous for Assembly and Dr. Simeon Sheldon for Treasurer.

The Republicans of the Second Vermont District have nominated Hon. Luke P. Poland for Congress and Elisha Standard, of Townsend, for Presidential Elector.

A large and enthusiastic Republican meeting was held in Potsdam, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., yesterday afternoon and evening. Gov. Perham, and Gen. Caldwell, of Maine, made addresses.

The Republicans of Hudson, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, assembled in large numbers at the City Hall last evening, and were ably addressed by Gen. Stewart L. Woodford and Hon. Francis Silvester.

Hon. David R. Munn has announced himself as an independent Republican candidate for Congress in the Eighth Tennessee District. Hon. W. W. Vaughan, the present representative and Democratic candidate, has withdrawn.

A large O'Conor and Adams meeting was held at Cook's Hall, Princeton, N. J., Tuesday night. Speeches were made by W. W. Meredith and J. K. H. Willcox. The Greeleyites made several ineffectual efforts to break up the meeting.

The supporters of O'Conor and Adams had a barbecue at Mouns Rose, N. J., on Tuesday last. Mr. W. Whitely Meredith, ex-member of the State Legislature, presided, and addresses were delivered by C. Chauncey Burr and J. K. H. Willcox.

At a Republican District Convention for the First Vermont Congressional District, held at Rutland, Vt., yesterday, Hon. Chester W. Willard, of Montpelier, was unanimously renominated for Congress, and Col. Alonson Allen, of Fair Haven, was nominated for District Elector.

The Grant and Wilson Club of New-Rochelle met on Tuesday evening. The attendance was large and spirited. Delegations of Boys in Blue from the neighboring towns of East Chester, Mamaroneck and Rye were present. After a brief address from Col. John Fowler, Jr., President of the Club, speeches were made by Hon. Amherst Wiggt, Jr., of Eve, and Hon. Thomas D. Adams, of Massachusetts.

Local Notes.

The Sixth District Republican Congressional Convention nominated Dr. Adolph G. Dunn, and not Adolph G. Dilng, as stated yesterday.

Mr. John Heckler declines the Apollo nomination for Assembly in the Eighth District. He will support the Republican candidate, John B. Smith.

Col. Thorpe addressed a largely-attended meeting of the Fifteenth Assembly District Republican Association last evening, at Kromm's Hall, No. 346 West Twenty-third-street.

The Eighth Ward Unity Grant and Wilson Club met last evening at No. 10 Sullivan-street, Mr. D. R. Johnson in the chair. Two or three Republican State and City tickets were nominated, and Mr. Lewis J. Phillips was recommended as a candidate for Congress. There was a large attendance.

A meeting of colored citizens took place last evening at No. 186 West Broadway, and indorsed the nomination of James Fitzgerald for Alderman and James O'Brien for Mayor.

The Twentieth Assembly District Republican Association, in conference with the German and Working Men's Associations, have united in nominating Wm. S. Opdyke for the Assembly, and Hermann Rocke for Assistant Alderman of the same district.

A meeting of the Nineteenth Ward Council of Political Reform was held last evening at Brevoort Hall, Fifty-fourth-street and Third-avenue, Mr. Charles Whitlock in the chair. Mr. S. B. Morison was nominated for Assembly, and a resolution was adopted indorsing the nominations approved by the Committee of Seventy.

A meeting of the Grant and Wilson Campaign Club of the Nineteenth Ward was held last evening at the corner of Fourth-avenue and Fifty-seventh-street. Resolutions indorsing Grant and Wilson for President and Vice-President, and O'Brien and Wood for Mayor and Congressmen, were adopted.

The Irish Independent League met on Tuesday night at No. 30 Greenwich-avenue, the President, Gen. F. P. Millet, in the chair. Gen. U. S. Grant and Hon. Henry Wilson received the indorsement of the League. A committee was appointed to wait upon the Chairman of the Republican General Committee and apprise him of this action.

The Mercantile Reform Association met last evening at the Gilsey House, Mr. O'Hara in the chair. Over 200 members were present. It was resolved to adopt the entire Apollo Hall ticket. On motion of Mr. W. Crawford, it was resolved that the name of Mr. C. A. Johnes, of the firm of B. Clews & Co., be specially recommended to Apollo Hall and the Committee of Seventy for Alderman. A deputation of fifteen was appointed to wait on the Committee of Seventy to present the ticket indorsed by the Association, and urge its adoption.

The Committee of Seventy met at the Everett House, Union-square, last evening, Mr. Choate in the chair. A number of delegations from various political organizations, including the German Republican Council of Political Reform and Executive Committee of Fifty, were admitted, and suggested names for Assemblymen, Aldermen, and other civic officers for adoption by the Committee. The Apollo Hall ticket for the Judiciary was also presented for indorsement. The Committee will be unable to make a selection before Friday or Saturday next.

MEXICO.

A New Legislative Dome of Government Inaugurated.

HAVANA, Oct. 21, via KEY WEST, Fla., Oct. 24.—Late advices from the City of Mexico have been received. The Mexican Congress had created a Senate. Heavy rains had prevailed in Mexico.

Improved State of Political Affairs—Insurrection of the Texas States Ordered—Manatlan in the Hands of the Government.

CITY OF MEXICO, Oct. 14, via HAVANA, Oct. 21.—The political situation is improving, and it is thought the Administration of Lerdo de Tejada will be successful. The primary elections took place on the 13th inst. Lerdo de Tejada's nomination was unopposed, and the result will probably be declared in time for him to enter upon the regular term of office, which is the 1st of December.

The Minister of Fomento has presented a message to Congress urging a concession to Plumb's International Railroad, connecting the Capital, Lagos, and Manzalan with the United States. The recommendation of the Minister is in the strongest terms, showing the great interest felt by the Executive in the building of the railroad. The Government grants the Company a subvention of $6,500 for each kilometer of road it shall build, an extra premium of $100,000 for every mile over ten miles, and a monopoly of ten years, and many other advantages.

A commission has been appointed to investigate affairs on the Rio Grande, and has been instructed to investigate everything. The Two Republics says this is unlike the American Commission, which was made an excuse for examination. The same journal also says that affairs on the Rio Grande have been greatly exaggerated, and that at all in possession of American testimony showing that Gen. Cortina, since entering the service of the Government, has neither been guilty of robbery nor the robbing of citizens of Texas of their cattle. The Government has relieved Gen. Cortina from service on the Rio Grande frontier, and ordered him to report at the capital.

Manatlan is again in possession of the Government. Porfirio Diaz and Donato Guerra are the only rebels of note who have not accepted amnesty.

THE TURF.

Second Day of the Maryland Jockey Club Fall Meeting.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 23.—Today was the second day of the Maryland Jockey Club races.

FIRST RACE.—Purse $600 for four-year-olds and upward; two miles, $450 to winner, $100 to second horse, $50 to third horse. Seven started, and Preakness came in first, Frank Hampton second and John Merriman third. Time 3:29¾. Fanchon led off for a mile, with Lord Scottmore next, Frank Hampton and Preakness following. At the second quarter of the last mile, Preakness took the lead and kept it to the score.

SECOND RACE.—Purse $600, for three-year-olds, except those placed in the Dixie Stakes; one mile. Six started, and Buckden was first, Sue Ryder second, and Nevada third. Time—1:44¾. The race was a fine one. Nevada holding the lead to the half-mile, Buckden following, and Wheatly third. On the three-quarter stretch Buckden took the lead, holding it to the score.

THIRD RACE.—Central Stakes, for two-year-olds, one mile, $50 entrance, play or pay, club to add $600; twenty-three nominations. Two started, and Catesby was first and Count D'Orsay second. Time, 1:46. With a single exception this race is said to be the fastest two-year-old race ever run in the country. Catesby took the lead at the start and won by three lengths.

FOURTH RACE.—Purse $1,000, mile heats, best three in five for all ages; $600 to first, $300 to second horse. The result was in favor of Tubman, in three straight heats, beating Arizona. Time—1:46½, 1:47¼, 1:48. Tubman was an easy winner each heat.

To-morrow is an off day. The races will be continued on Friday and Saturday.

Hall's Driving Park Races.

There were three races on the programme for the second day of the meeting at Hall's Driving Park yesterday. The attendance was not as large as that of the preceding day, in consequence of the weather. The first event was a match for $200, between Literature and Nellie; the second also a match for $800, between W. H. Ripley and Clarence, the latter paying forfeit, as he is at present suffering from the disease now prevalent among horses. The third was the purse of $300 for 2:27 horses.

ALLEGED CRUELTY.

Death of a Seaman from Alleged Ill-Treatment in the Navy.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 23.—The death of David Cady, a seaman on board the United States steamer Kansas, is alleged to have resulted from severity, by order of Lieut.-Commander White, of that vessel. The story is that while in Aspinwall, on April 26, Cady came aboard drunk, and was put in irons and gagged in such a way that he finally died. It is said that an investigation was begun, but never concluded, at a Gulf port. Lieut.-Commander White is now on the Onward, in the South Atlantic Squadron. The Kansas left Salem on Tuesday for Newport, R. I.

THE WASHINGTON TREATY.

Decision of the San Juan Boundary Question.

Emperor William Indorses the American Interpretation of the Original Treaty—Comments of Minister Bancroft on the Result.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 23.—The following dispatch was to-night received from Minister Bancroft:

BERLIN, Oct. 23, 1872.

To Hon. Hamilton Fish:

The three experts to whom the American memorial on the Canal De Haro and the British case were referred have made, each for himself, a very elaborate report on the question, supporting their opinions by reasons stated with technical precision and exactness. The Emperor has also, with the highest sense of official duty, given his personal attention to the subject, and, after the most careful study and deliberation, he has arrived at a conclusion satisfactory to his own sense of justice. The reports of the experts, with reasons, have not been communicated to us. The decree of the Imperial arbitrator, which has been communicated, has the form not so much of a decree in council as of a Cabinet order. It does not enter into any elaborate exposition of the decision, but, without diverging in the least from the point presented for arbitration, decrees that the claim of the United States of America is most in accordance with the true interpretation of the treaty of June 15, 1846. I shall forward the official copy of the decree by a special messenger.

(Signed.) BANCROFT.

NEW-YORK.

Senator Conkling at Seneca Falls—Large Meeting and Much Enthusiasm.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SENECA FALLS, N. Y., Oct. 23.—The largest gathering held in this county for years assembled to listen to Hon. Roscoe Conkling this evening. Delegations from Geneva, Auburn, Waterloo and Cayuga came by boat-loads. Mr. Conkling was obliged, by the boat on the lake failing to connect with the train, to drive from Geneva in a carriage, and arrived after 8 o'clock. Hundreds were unable to get within the second of his voice. The speech was by the Irrepressibles, and "The Sear's Lament," in character by Master Willie McDonald, were encored heartily. The meeting will have a good effect in this neat of Democracy. Dr. G. W. Davis presided. Senator Conkling was in fine spirits and made a powerful speech. After the meeting he was serenaded and made a brief response.

Grand Republican Demonstration in Binghamton—Speeches by Gen. Wilcox and Others.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Oct. 23.—Despite the heavy rain today, one of the greatest Republican demonstrations ever witnessed in Western New-York was made here. There was a great procession with many unique features in the morning, and in the afternoon Senator Wilson spoke to a large crowd in the Opera-house, while Hon. B. G. Noble addressed one as large in the Court-house this evening. The rain having ceased there was one of the largest and finest torch-light displays ever seen in the State. Gen. Clark E. Carr and Gen. J. H. Warwick spoke during the evening, but the Republican Posts were more intent upon a grand jubilee than on listening to speeches. The events of the day and night are certain to give a strong impetus to the cause, and an unprecedented Republican majority in November is equally certain. E. C.

Large Republican Meeting in Cortland.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CORTLAND, N. Y., Oct. 23.—One of the largest political meetings ever held in Marathon was addressed last evening by Col. Albert D. Shaw, who for nearly three hours held the attention of the audience in a powerful and eloquent review of the political issues of the hour. It was announced some of the ablest and most convincing efforts of the campaign. Great enthusiasm prevailed, and Cortland County can be relied upon to do her whole duty this Fall.

Democratic Finale in Troy—Demoralization Meeting in Mayhly.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 23.—The Democrats of this city tried hard to get up a big mass meeting here this evening. The attempt was a complete failure. On account of the emptiness of the treasury of the County Committee, the originators of the fizzle were unable to hire a hall, and it was at first intended to hold the meeting out of doors. The speakers declined to consent to this arrangement, and one of the rooms of the Court-house was thrown open. There for three hours James S. Thayer and E. O. Perry, old Know-Nothings, and H. R. Burnham, an apostate Republican, talked to unenthusiastic auditors.

Senator Wilson at Corning—Enthusiastic Meeting.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CORNING, N. Y., Oct. 23.—The largest and most enthusiastic Republican meeting ever held in Corning was held this evening. There was a fine torch-light parade and brilliant illumination. The meeting continued three hours and a half. Speeches were made by Senator Henry Wilson, Gen. O'Beirne and Hon. J. A. Briggs. This meeting will do great good. The enthusiasm was unbounded.

11...Packard	....	995
Total	7,168	8,132
Total Republican majority		964

The total number of votes for Governor was 257,700, being an increase in four years of over 20,000.

The Straight-out Democratic ticket received about 120 votes in the entire State.

Wrecked Off the Newfoundland Coast—Two Lives Lost—Ashore and Burned to the Water's Edge.

HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 23.—The bark Premier, of Bonaventure, from Quebec, for Holyhead, was wrecked off the Newfoundland coast, on the 1st of October. Two men were lost, the remainder being taken off by fishermen and landed at Bay St. George, Newfoundland.

A French schooner, of forty tons, from St. Pierre, bound to Bras d'Or Lake, went ashore at Flint Island, on the night of the 19th inst., caught fire and burned to the water's edge. The crew landed on the island, and were brought to the main land the next morning.

VERMONT.

Nomination of Hon. Luke P. Poland for Congress in the Second District—Presidential Elector.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WHITE RIVER JUNCTION, Vt., Oct. 23.—The Republican Convention for the nomination of a candidate for Representative to Congress from the Second District, and also a Presidential Elector, was held here today. Every town in the district was represented. Hon. L. P. Poland and Hon. B. H. Steele were the only candidates. On the first and final ballot Hon. L. P. Poland was nominated by a vote of 89 to 60.

Hon. A. Stoddard, of Townsend, was chosen a candidate for elector by a unanimous vote.

BALTIMORE ELECTIONS.

The Result of the Vote for Councilmen Yesterday—Large Republican Gains—Two More Members of the Common Council Republican.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 23.—The annual election for members for the first branch of the Common Council was held today, and passed off very quietly, there being no excitement, even at the polling places in the most strongly contested districts. The Republicans are congratulating themselves on the result of the election, as a gain of two members has been made, and two others of their candidates were not defeated by the strength of the Democratic opposition against them. The total vote was 24,886, of which 14,043 were Democratic and 10,843 Republican, Temperance, and Independent. Last year there were 22,874 Democratic and 14,723 Republican votes cast on Governor.

In the Fifteenth Ward Mr. James Hughes, Republican, has been re-elected, by a majority of 12, over his Democratic opponent, against a majority of only two last year, but there were a Temperance and Independent candidate in the field who took 64 votes which would otherwise have been cast for Mr. Hughes. In the Sixteenth Ward Mr. James McClellan has 129 majority, a Republican gain of 150. In the Twentieth Ward Mr. George W. Fisher has a majority of 124 over the Democratic candidate, and 72 plurality, 8 votes having been polled for a Temperance candidate. On the comparison of the Democratic and Republican votes in this ward, a Republican gain of 262 is indicated. There were enough Republican and Temperance votes polled in the Fifth and Ninth Wards to elect Democratic candidates. In the Fifth, Eleventh, Eighteenth and Nineteenth the Republicans lost by a small minority. Mr. Hughes was the only Republican in the first branch last year.

Owing to the races at Pimlico, and a wet afternoon coming on, the Democratic Dan vote was very light, but it is an indication of what will be done on the 5th of November; and if the feeling in the rural districts may be indged by that in the city, Greeley will not have 10,000 majority in the State. Before the October elections I was confidently asserted that Maryland would go Democratic by over 40,000. The most sanguine do not now claim more than 20,000. The Republican Committees are working hard, and will make a good showing.

CUBA AND PORTO RICO.

Disturbance Apprehended at Porto Rico—Conflict with Cuban Insurgents—The Latter Defeated.

HAVANA, Oct. 21, via KEY WEST, Fla., Oct. 23.—The correspondence of the Havana journal indicate an excited state of affairs at Porto Rico, and a disturbance between the Liberals and Conservatives is thought probable. It is reported that Gov. Rivas has returned to Spain.

The insurgents under Dias attacked the village of Cano, one league from Manzanillo. The fighting was severe, but a reinforcement of Cazadas arrived, and the insurgents were compelled to retire. Six rebels and three Spaniards were killed.

Another body of Dias's forces made an attack upon Lasal, but it proved unsuccessful.

MR. YATES' LECTURES.

Mr. Edmund Yates will deliver, at Association Hall, on Monday, his lecture called "Princes of the Pen." Mr. Yates was intimate with Thackeray and Dickens, and with most of the eminent writers of whom he is to treat. Some interesting reminiscences, rehearsed with the spirit and geniality apparent in the lecturer's earlier efforts may, therefore, be awaited.

Musical.

THE SEASON OF OPERA.

A performance of "Don Giovanni," both symmetrical and impressive, was witnessed at the Academy of Music, last evening, by an assemblage that filled the house in respect alike of seats and standing-room. The reader need scarcely be informed that Mozart's immortal work calls into requisition the services of a double company, and it will, therefore, have been inferred that an acknowledgment of its equable and satisfying recital is paramount to hearty commendation of the talent and musical strength of the interpreting forces. Yesterday "Don Giovanni" enlisted the labors of Mme. Pauline Lucca, Miss Kellogg and Miss Clara Doria; those of Signori Vizzani, Moriani and Ronconi, and those of MM. Jamet and Coulon. The efforts of the most conspicuous of these performers wrought the intended effect of delighting to an extent expressed by enthusiastic applause; and the united energies of all concerned failed not to please that smaller portion of the audience which has not yet been corrupted by the evils of the "star" system, destined to obtain in opera as in the drama. After Mme. Lucca's capital personation of the music heroine of "Fra Diavolo," nothing less than a thoroughly natural and vivacious Zerlina was to be awaited at that lady's hands. The expectation was fulfilled. In appearance Mme. Lucca was as Castilian as the most realistic critic of countenances and costumes could desire; as an actress, she approved herself continually appreciative of circumstances and text; as a songstress, of course, she made light of her share in the duet "La ci darem," of "Batti, batti!" and of "Vedrai, carino," and repeated each of these performances in deference to plaudits bestowed with almost unprecedented unanimity. Mme. Lucca was thrice recalled after act the second had ended. Miss Kellogg was the Donna Anna. We do not think the artist was in as good voice as usual, but she was quite as earnest and as conscientious, and her singing did not disappoint the hopes evinced by a cordial reception. Donna Anna, however, will not rank with Miss Kellogg's most successful exertions. Miss Doria represented Donna Elvira respectably, but her attis are not equal to her acquirements. Signor Vizzani was in excellent vocal condition. He delivered the music allotted to Don Ottavio with correctness and taste, and sang "Il mio tesoro" with much sweetness. But as a singer and a comedian he is not to be named with Signor Moriani, who portrayed Don Giovanni with a warmth and an elegance very rare among Italian artists. Signor Moriani's picture of the traditional libertine has a brilliancy of color and a wealth of detail which the general spectator is hardly fitted to discover. The recognition of his merits as a singer found utterance at the usual points, and his duet with Zerlina, the "Finch'al vino," and his capital acting in the closing scenes won for him a liberal share of the laurels of the night. M. Jamet's sketch of Leporello was made known by last year's experience as elaborate, amusing, and quite free from the downright clownishness habitually incurable from the character.

Reactionary Policy of the Japanese Government—Hostility on the Part of Corea.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 23.—The steamer Colorado, from Hong Kong Sept. 21 and Yokohama Oct. 2, has arrived here, and brings the following news:

The Japanese Government has liberated the coolies brought by the Peruvian vessel Maria Luz, under a plea of ill treatment. A Mandarin had arrived, and they will be sent to China. In Yeddo the mortality was excessive. The authorities had notified foreigners residing outside of foreign settlements to return at once, and the Japanese were forbidden to lease premises to them. This course is considered impolitic and illiberal by the friends of the Government.

The new paper money made in Berlin has been already counterfeited.

A telegraph line from Yeddo to Nagasaki has been opened. The railroad from Yeddo to Yokohama has been completed, and was to be formally opened by the Mikado on the 12th inst. The Mikado would also visit Yokohama.

A severe earthquake shock was experienced at Yokohama on the 15th ult.

Corea has sent more threatening letters to Japan. Six war vessels, convoyed by one war, have been sent to Corea for the purpose of bringing back all Japanese in the country, preparatory to further measures on the part of the Japanese Government. Several foreign war vessels have congregated at Che-foo, in anticipation of trouble with the Japanese.

Several Japanese sailors, shipwrecked on Formosa Island, were eaten by the natives. The King of the Loo Chuos has sent an embassy to Yeddo for aid to avenge their death.

An attempt was recently made to assassinate Hanji, one of the Chief Justices of Japan.

COLLISION AT SEA.

Inhuman Conduct of the Captain of an English Steamer—He Runs Into a Vessel and Deserts Her.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The United States Consul at Liverpool has furnished to the Department of State an affidavit of a seaman on board the steamer John Stratter, of South Shields, which had arrived from Boston, Coming from Boston to Liverpool, and when about thirty-five miles from Boston, the British vessel ran down an American schooner, name unknown, it being too dark to see it. The affiant does not know whether the schooner went down or not, for the Captain of the British vessel kept straight ahead, without attempting to give assistance. One of the life-boats of the steamer was smashed, but the hull was not damaged, and the engines were not stopped. The John Stratter arrived at Liverpool Sept. 25.

TWEED AND HALL.

Both in the Court of Oyer and Terminer.

The New Indictments—The "Sons" Admitted to Bail—Fields' Forfeited—A Jury Found Wanting.

The Court of Oyer and Terminer, now being held by Judge Brady, was yesterday the scene of unusual excitement, as the proceedings were of the gravest importance, as well to the citizens of the City of New-York in general as to the persons immediately interested therein as defendants. The previous announcement in the public Press that Tweed, Fields and Hall would be called on to plead to new indictments growing out of what are known as the "Ring Frauds," and that some one of them would probably be placed on trial, drew to the Court-room a large attendance, including members of the Bar, City officials, and citizens generally. A large array of counsel was also present, interested on one side or the other of the trials. For the people appeared, in connection with District-Attorney Garvin, Messrs. Wheeler H. Peckham and Henry L. Clinton. On behalf of Fields appeared Messrs. Wm. A. Beach and Miles Beach, while W. M. Tweed was defended by Messrs. John Graham, David Dudley Field, Willard Bartlett, John A. Burrill, and Samuel G. Courtney.

Immediately upon the opening of the Court, and after having disposed of a brief motion in the case of Stokes, the case of Thomas C. Fields, indicted for fraudently obtaining a large amount of money from the City, was called on for trial. Fields not answering to the call of Mr. Sparks, the Clerk, Mr. William A. Beach, his counsel, addressing the Court on his behalf, said that since the previous day when in Court in the case, he had not had any communication with his client, and was not therefore, of course, prepared to go to trial in his absence. The only question before the Court would be the forfeiture of the bail of the accused. On this question he could but make an appeal to the Court on behalf of the bondsmen. Former proceedings had not looked directly to a trial on this day, and, as already stated in the affidavit submitted to the Court, there could be but little doubt that the accused, in absenting himself, had acted on the strong impression conveyed to him by him (counsel) that the trial would not be reached during the present term; therefore some little time should be afforded to the bondsmen to produce their principal, or for the latter to voluntarily present himself.

District-Attorney Garvin said a formal forfeiture of the bond might be taken now, and then a short delay might be allowed before entering up judgment.

Mr. Beach said that would be satisfactory, provided the time of delay were named.

District-Attorney Garvin—You can have thirty days before entering judgment.

The usually called Clerk then called Fields, and, there being no response, his bond, on which appear the names of William J. Florence and Michael J. Quigg, was declared forfeited.

TWEED'S CASE.

Judge Brady here announced that, after a very careful consideration of the motion previously made in the case of Tweed to quash the indictment pending in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, he had come to the conclusion that such indictment and those subsequently found in the Court of General Sessions were for distinct crimes and founded on different matter. He simply announced his decision denying the motion, but did not, in writing his reasoning any opinion, lest it might interfere with any subsequent motion which might be made in the case.

MAYOR HALL'S TRIAL.

At this point Mayor Hall was seen elbowing his way through the crowd, and as he approached the counsel table, he addressed the Court, and said he had just received from District-Attorney a courteous note to attend in Court and put in bail on a new indictment found against him. Six indictments had been previously found against him, on one of which a trial or mistrial had been had. Subsequently to that trial, a motion was made to remove the remaining three indictments to this County, and while awaiting a decision of the Court on that motion a consent was filed with the District-Attorney on his (Hall's) behalf, that these six indictments be removed to Court of Oyer and Terminer. He (Hall) now forward that an indictment has been found in this Court embracing the other six, and including therewith a history of the proceedings of the Board of Audit, with which, under the inscrutable decrees of Providence, he happened to be identified. He (Hall) understood he was present, prepared to renew bail if required. He was, if he recollects aright, the third Mayor of this City whose lot it had been to come within the embrace of the District-Attorney of the County. District-Attorney Whiting had prosecuted for the offense of unlawfully taking the pay of a certain Judge; and again, during the official period of District-Attorney Blunt, Mayor Wood was indicted for some alleged official misconduct in respect to a lease. In those cases the District-Attorneys then in office took the responsibility of the prosecution upon themselves, but in the present case, and in the present excitement and sentiment of the public mind, politically and otherwise, it was not for him (Hall) to suggest what course should be pursued. He was not an implicit believer in the theory of Attorney Bonaparte, that moral pressure on a public officer, was as dangerous to liberty as immoral pressure; but whatever might be the direction of the Court in the premises, he was present to obey its behests, at any and all times.

District-Attorney Garvin asked that the accused be called upon to plead to the new indictment now.

Mayor Hall asked if it was proposed to have him read that book now, referring to the new indictment, which makes a large printed volume, and he was under the impression that it was properly before the Court until the question of bail had been disposed of. On that question he intended to move that the bail be annulled on the other indictments they being embraced in the.

District-Attorney Garvin said no formal order had been entered on the consent to remove the General Sessions indictments to the Court of Oyer and Terminer.

Mayor Hall regarded the filing of the consent as equivalent to an order of removal, and as to the indictments themselves, his Honor could see at a glance that they were embraced in this.

District-Attorney Garvin said there was no such intention of quashing this indictment, might or might not embrace the other five or six indictments.

Mayor Hall—Then I shall leave it with the District-Attorney to suggest the amount of bail.

District-Attorney Garvin—I think $5,000 will be sufficient.

Mayor Hall replied that he was prepared to give it, and demanded a trial forthwith on the indictment.

District-Attorney Garvin—If he will plead to the indictment now, I will impanel a jury and proceed with the trial as one.

Mayor Hall—Yes, Sir, I plead not guilty, and am ready to go to trial now—this moment.

District-Attorney Garvin, (to Mr. Sparks, the Clerk.)—Call a jury.

TWEED APPEARS.

At this moment Tweed entered, and amid a buzz of excitement, took his seat behind his counsel, Mr. Graham.

Mr. Graham, addressing the Court on behalf of Tweed, said he had received notice from the District-Attorney of two additional indictments having been found against his client, and in obedience to notice communicated by him (counsel) Mr. Tweed was now present to tender bail, and to obtain his return from his absence which took him temporarily out of the City. He was here, counsel said, notwithstanding the lying statements of the newspapers that he was trying to evade a trial. Were the time, he argued, it would be shown that at the very time when his client is charged with running away, two rival political parties are contending for his support, one of which, under the apprehension that he is favorable to the other, is now urging this prosecution. He would now ask that, in conformity with the settled rule of the common law the District-Attorney be compelled to indorse on each indictment the names of the witnesses before the Grand Jury on whose testimony such indictments were found.

District-Attorney Garvin said although such had been the rule at common law, it had not been the practice in this State for over forty years; nevertheless, he was willing to show to counsel the list of names of witnesses examined before the Grand Jury.

Judge Brady said he was under the impression that the rule of the common law prevailed in this State, but even if it did not, the offer of the District-Attorney covered all the ground taken on behalf of the accused.

Mr. Graham called attention to what he characterized as the indifferent conduct of the Sheriff in so unceremoniously "lighting" on his client after the latter had voluntarily presented himself in Court.

Judge Brady replied that in his judgment the Sheriff was only fulfilling his duty by putting Tweed under arrest the moment he found him in his presence.

Mr. Graham supposed much of this treatment of his client was due to feeling created against him by the public Press.

Judge Brady—If Mr. Tweed has been maligned by the Press, his remedy is against them. As for me, I desire it once for all, to be understood that I pay no attention to what the papers say in this or any other case. I intend that all cases coming before me shall be decided according to the law and the testimony, and irrespective of what may be said in or out of the papers.

Mr. Graham—We do intend to bring that up, and the publications may become perfect this trial, if it ever comes to trial.

District-Attorney Garvin—The only question now is that of pleading to these two new indictments.

Messrs. Field and Burrill rose in reply to this suggestion of the District-Attorney, and said some time would be necessary to examine the indictments before pleading to them, and that time they could arrange with the District-Attorney. In the mean time they asked that the amount of bail be fixed.

District-Attorney Garvin suggested that space of each indictment would be sufficient.

This was satisfactory to counsel for Tweed, who, with their clients, and by company with the Sheriff, left Court for the office of the District-Attorney, there to perfect bail. There Col. Fellows shook hands with Tweed and drew up the two bonds, Mr. Edward Kearney, of No. 48 Lexington-avenue, and Mr. Alfred S. Sands, of No. 194 East Twenty-sixth-street, becoming surety in $5,000 each. At 12:20 Tweed entered a close carriage in front of the new Court-house and drove up-town. In talking with the shoved Tweed said that he knew he had been indicted two weeks ago, and began to make his arrangements accordingly.

Preparations were then made for the trial of Mayor Hall. The indictment against the latter containing no facts not already familiar to the public, but simply charging all the alleged transactions complained of had been passed and signed by the Mayor as a member of the Board of Audit, while the original indictments embraced but one, the others being then intended to be introduced in evidence. The two new indictments against Tweed are almost identical with those already published, embracing no new facts, but merely covering and curing some defects in form.

Mr. Hall's counsel are his partner, Mr. A. J. Vanderpoel, and Mr. Emmet.

Judge Brady suggested that the indictment be read at once, and the actual trial postponed until to-morrow.

Mayor Hall—In answer to the accusation of the Ouitic, although this indictment looks very voluminous, yet it is substantially the same thing as was tried before, and with which I am perfectly familiar. The indictment is apparently larger than it really is.

In reply to Judge Brady, Mayor Hall said he was ready for trial, and was willing to accept the first twelve jurors called, reserving the right of peremptory challenge.

Joseph Lamb, Chas. J. Reilly, Emil J. Rosenbaum, Nathaniel L. Griswold, Alexander McGuire, Frederick W. Weber, Carroll Townsend, Jacob J. Rover, John H. Lyon, Morris A. Myers, Frederick Faubel, Jr., and Henry E. Tyler were called.

The Mayor challenged Mr. Griswold and Mr. McGuire peremptorily on the ground of old age, and Edward B. Holbrook and John R. O'Dell were called in their stead. A number of jurors were called and challenged by the prosecution, but finally the following jury was obtained and impaneled.

Charles J. Brill, No. 344 East Broadway; Edward B. Holbrook, No. 538 Ninth-avenue; John H. O'Dell, No. 342 West Forty-eighth-street; John Taylor, No. 139 Franklin-street; Jacob J. Hover, No. 315 Broadway; John H. Lyon, No. 354 Third-avenue; Morris A. Myers, No. 73 Sixth-avenue; Frederick Faubel, Jr., No. 78 Pearl-street; Henry E. Tyler, No. 12 Gold-street; Sigmund Warsaing, No. 226 Sixth-avenue; Franklin Goodwin, No. 222 East Nineteenth-street; Jean B. Baker, No. 65 Bayard-st.

Mr. Peckham said that they had obtained a jury without the ordinary success, and he asked an adjournment for one day.

Mayor Hall—I have been suffering under these cruel imputations so long that when I see a jury in the box I feel it as the star of my deliverance. I came here this morning ready. Time and time again have my friends been thought the bravado on my part, but it is not. There has not been a second of time, in the day or in the night, that I have not been ready to meet my accusers. While I might have one opinion in regard to any matter of negligence in the conduct of a transaction, I may have a very different opinion, when it will not be proper for me to express in regard to any criminality touching that negligence. The pleading in the indictment is drawn carefully and with great professional accuracy, and I do not see any reason why the other indictments with the case. I have business to attend to in connection with the Police Board, the Board of Apportionment, the Supervisors of Election, and other bodies; and as every moment is of the utmost importance to me, not only in my private business, but in official capacity, I ask that at least the prosecution open their case today.

Mr. Peckham then proceeded to open the case for the prosecution. He detailed at length the history of the appointment of the Board of Audit, and stated the duties which devolved upon them in their official office. He showed how 85,000 of claims were presented to them and passed, and continued to say that the indictment included all the claims presented by Keyser & Co., and also all the claims presented by Garvey, and some claims presented by Ingersoll and Miller. Some of the Keyser claims had been presented to a previous Board of Audit. He was notified by the underlings of the Board to make out no bills—by Mr. Woodward, and he believed by Mr. Ingersoll. He went there with his bills, and there in conclave they raised the bills thirty-three per cent. The old bills go into the old Board of Audit, were extravagant bills. Several of these bills were assembled. So they would see that as claims they were created, as to thirty-three per cent, by the very men who were to pass them precisely as they were presented. In bill, for instance, of $4,000 raised to $40,000 by Mr. Woodward, and by Mr. Tweed's aid was made a complete claim. Across the bill so raised Mr. Woodward wrote a certificate that it was correct, and to that Mr. Tweed attached his signature. Mr. Woodward then at the foot of the bill made a certificate of such that the Board of Audit had audited the bill, and this was sent round to the members of the Board for their signature. He described this action on the part of Tweed as fraud, and alleged that, as far as Hall was concerned, he would have shown from the amounts presented that it was simply impossible the work could have been done. Mr. Peckham referred to Garvey's claims, which have been already fully published, and said that the business of the jury was to ascertain the duties demanded from a public official. Mr. Hall, having accepted the trust under the statute, was bound to give all his time and attention to it, and they were to determine how far the officers intrusted with the care of public money were to be responsible for its loss. He commended as able address by asking them for a calm consideration of the evidence, and no matter what the result, the public and the law would be satisfied.

By request Judge Brady directed the jurors to speak to no one on the subject of the trial, nor to read newspaper comments, and the Court adjourned.

Edward S. Stokes—Motion to Fix a Day of Trial.

Messrs. Henry Daily, Jr., and John D. Townsend, counsel for Edward S. Stokes, yesterday appeared in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, before Judge Brady, and moved that an early day be fixed when the trial of their client shall proceed. It was the desire of counsel, he said, that, if necessary, this term of the Court should be extended into November, in order to allow the trial to proceed. If the trial should not proceed before December, they would be compelled to take the depositions of some five witnesses, and the results would be that the trial would have to proceed on depositions.

Judge Garvin argued that, by no possibility could the trial be proceeded with this term. Many of the witnesses for the prosecution had become scattered in different portions of the country, and could not be promptly got together. In any event he did not see how the Court could fix a day.

Mr. Townsend said he had notice from Mr. Tremain that he could attend the first week of next month, but could not attend during the second.

Mr. Garvin said, another impediment in the way of a trial this term was the approaching election; the trial had occupied much time before, and the community had become so impanelled with the facts that it might be necessary to remove the trial to another county in order to get a jury.

Mr. Townsend said he did not think the question of difficulty in getting a jury should prevail with the Court on this application. He had no doubt that a jury could be obtained on a second trial with much more ease than on the first.

Judge Brady said he was in favor, and he thought justice demanded that Stokes have an early trial, and for this purpose he was disposed to extend the term. The difficulty seemed to be, however, that he was assigned to the General Term next month, and extending the term would involve the necessity of a Judge being assigned either here or to the General Term. He would take the matter under consideration, and see if under all the circumstances, he could not comply with the application of the prisoner's counsel.

His counsel stated that although frequent demands had been made for a trial, the District-Attorney had only said that he would report when he had conferred with his associates; also that Stokes' health was suffering from his long incarceration.

The Harlem Mystery.

The friends of Nicholas Scabrock, whose death under mysterious circumstances at No. 123 East One Hundred and Twenty-third-street, together with the strange proceedings of Dr. Worcester Beach, a Deputy Coroner, in disposing of the case without holding an examination, have already been published in the TIMES, called at the Coroners' office yesterday in search of Dr. Beach. They expressed themselves as very anxious to have the matter thoroughly ventilated, and the cause of the death of Scabrock fully settled by a post-mortem examination of the remains. An application will be made to the Board of Health for permission to have the body of the deceased exhumed for that purpose. The friends of the deceased were very indignant at the manner in which the case had been disposed of by the Deputy Coroner, and they intend to invoke the aid of some other Coroner, unless Coroner Keenan shall take some action in the matter at once.

THE HALLETT MYSTERY.

The Witness Still Refuses to Answer—The Contractor's Book-Keeper Keeping Time for Genet—The Mysterious Jones.

The Senate Commissioners resumed their inquiry yesterday at the City Hall, as to the alleged frauds in the construction of the Ninth District Court-house. James Rogers, who entered the number for John Scollon in 1868 and 1869, was examined by Mr. Ketchell, but either could not or would not give any particulars as to where the lumber was delivered. He said that Scollon's book-keeper, Richard Hatch, told him to make out a separate bill for lumber delivered across town, but he was then unable to do so, and could not now. He was ordered to produce his books of account with Scollon at the next session, he having asserted that he had transacted no business with either Genet or the Ninth District Court-house. The following testimony was then taken:

John T. Palmer said that from the Fall of 1870 until November, 1871, he was engaged in the Court-house, partly as a mason under instructions and partly as timekeeper. He was paid by John Scollon the same as the others; the work was done by some men on the work, he had done it; Joseph McGuide kept the time when he did not; he (witness) was arranged the journeymen received from $4 to $5 per day; witness received only $3.50; could not tell why this sum was paid him; witness was employed by Genet; he knew most of the men employed on the same work.

Mr. Ketchell handed the witness the pay-roll, and he checked off twenty-two of the names as correct, leaving some unchecked.

Examination resumed—Did not know what became of the time-books; believed they were destroyed; had himself kept some, but they had since been burned; could not produce them; knew Stephen Cartwright, who left the work on the Court-house to join the Fire Department; could not tell where he lived; he was while witness was acting as time-keeper; Cartwright did not return to work so far as witness knew; John Donovan worked as laborer on the Court-house and went to work on Genet's house after the Court-house work stopped; W. Genet, Jr., worked on the Court-house as carpenter; witness did not recollect his working on H. W. Genet's house; Tom Smith, who had been a waiter in Harlem, was employed as a mason on the Court-house; did not recollect the names of any of the men employed at Genet's house although engaged to become their time-keeper; did not know he had worked at Genet's house.

Mr. Ketchell placed a ticket in witness' hand, worded as follows: "Delivery, New-York, March 25, 1871. For Mr. John Scollon, One Hundred and Twenty-sixth-street and Fifth-avenue. Received from Thomas J. Crombie, &c., fifty spruce two-inch plank," and signed "John Scollon, per J. Palmer."

Examination resumed—Signed this paper, but did not enter Court-house; when material came into Court-house was checked off by Mr. Hatch; did not notice that the plank was delivered at H. W. Genet's house; Mickerly, Gale, superintended the carpenter-work, and John Scollon the work generally; was present when Genet had a talk with Mickerly; did not hear what they said; Genet did not remember; they never heard that they had paid for it; did not call the roll, or keep an account of the laborers; did not know that they inspected the building; had not seen Genet for two years; but little Genet knew that he had anything about the Court-house; was present when part of the excavation was dug; believed Scollon then kept no time-book; never saw Scollon; knew John Jones, Jr., McCoole, and other witnesses only signed for; wheelbarrow for Court-house and Genet's house; Genet's house, Twenty-second and Twenty-third and One Hundred and Twenty-fourth streets, and left one at Genet's house, by order of Scollon; Scollon paid the men at the Court-house; and Genet paid the men at his house; Genet paid the men working for Genet were on the pay-roll of the Court-house; had signed for cements delivered, but did not remember any quantity like 500 barrels; 1,000 barrels of cement; 500 barrels lime; 500 barrels; Wilson's carman delivered the cement, and it was stored in the shed adjoining the office; Joseph McGuire signed for some of it.

Cross-examined—Was employed by Scollon during 1870 and 1871, testified that he had charge of the work to be done according to the plans furnished by Jones; paid neither to do with Genet's house; did not employ men on the church; thought they were bona fide; never signed any tickets for materials delivered, and did not know who did; did not know who delivered the cement.

Mr. KETCHELL—Then you did not receive any of the materials yourself.

WITNESS—I did not; I would have been glad to it I had; I received the same pay; but I didn't get the chance. [Loud laughter.]

Examination continued—Did not recollect Michael Farrell as working on the Court-house; knew several of his sons; Michael was the first to go on the work, and the last to leave it.

Witness here identified several names on the pay-roll as having been engaged on the work.

Examination continued—Knew Mr. J. Wesley Palmer at the works at all; did not know him and never saw him; Lewis Baker was around sometimes; did not know Philip H. Jonas, and never saw him; James Rogers was there; Genet was there; Genet's house in September, 1870; the excavation was not completed until the Spring of 1871, only enough to enable the masons to commence the area wall; a great deal of water; Genet's house; Genet had the brick built in cement; did not know how much was received at one time, but the shed was full; witness did not keep the account of the work done by the masons; knew Stephen Cartwright; James Lee; never might have kept that of the carpenters for his brother, Michael J. Quigg.

Before commencing his testimony this witness was very anxious to know who was going to pay him for his loss of time in attending the Commission, and said he had lost enough without an additional $4.75. The Chairman said he would cut what the law allowed.

There being no further witnesses present, the inquiry was adjourned until to-morrow.

BROADWAY.

Condition of the Pavement—Operations of the Contractors.

The rugged appearance of the new pavement in Broadway, from the Battery up, has given rise to the belief in some people's minds that it is poorly laid, and a bad fulfillment of the contract. The facts are these: The crest of the road is mostly unbroken, and the curve of the surface in proper proportion. The disintegration of the stone, so far, seems to have been very slight. The first bad spot is noticeable at the intersection of Broadway and Fulton-street, and occasionally heavy loads stick here, and cause a blockade. The defective portion is small, and would require a few hours only to put it in order. Opposite Park-place, and near the new post-office building, there is quite a hollow, which time is sure to make worse. This should be attended to forthwith. At the corner of Broadway and Warren-street the pavine shows badly, leaving the west side, opposite No. 258, there is some bad pavement, arising from some recently-laid pipe. All these faults to the street are slight, and on the whole, the condition of Broadway is excellent. West Prince-street, running north, on the east side, there are several blocks where the pavements is in bad order, from the recent introduction of pipes by the new gas company, the road-bed being in some places, for a width of three feet or more, sometimes five inches above the level, or as much below it. Laborers are working on this portion of the street.

It appears that the pipe had been laid down with commendable rapidity. Just after the trench had been refilled, and the stones placed on top, it was allowed to remain in this condition long enough for the ground to settle. Afterward, the regular street-contractors passed over the work, rendering the concrete and putting back the stones in a proper level with the street. That this is a fact, is evident from the appearance of Broadway above Tenth-street, where the new gas pipes are to been introduced. Here the work has been passed over again by the regular contractors. Just at Tenth-st. there is that portion of Broadway from Prince-street up has settled properly, the reporter was assured that the rough portions would be put in proper order ere long.

The Grand Jury of the Oyer and Terminer.

The Grand Jury met again yesterday at 10 A. M., and adjourned at 1½ P. M. It was understood that their investigations embraced no cases in connection with the Ring. Today the Jury will bring into the Court a number of indictments, and on Friday they will finish their labors. It is generally believed that the indictments assumed to have been found against members of the Ring will be among those presented today. No witnesses in connection with Ring frauds were examined yesterday, and the Ring indictments, if any, were found several days ago, but for prudent reasons have been kept back by the District-Attorney.

Remarkable Manner of Sentencing Criminals—A Curious Story About Two Female Thieves.

Mary Anne Taylor is probably the oldest and most dangerous female thief in this City. She has been arrested scores of times, but beyond the temporary inconvenience of a short incarceration in the Tombs, or a brief Summer sojourn on Blackwell's Island, her numerous and successful efforts at robbery have not been attended with any marked degree of punishment. Combining in herself all the attributes of a smart pickpocket and shoplifter, it was not unnatural that she would marry in "the profession," and she became the wife of Thomas Taylor, alias Spectacle Tommy, a noted pickpocket. Almost all of Mary Anne's depredations have been confined to this City.

Ellen Williams is also a female thief. Her operations were chiefly in the West, and she rarely troubled this City. At the time of Mary Anne Taylor's release from Blackwell's Island, Ellen Williams came on to this City from Ohio, where she had served a term for grand larceny. The two met, and went into Bruckner's store, corner of Bleecker and Bedford-street, where they were detected stealing lace-shawls by Detective Farley, and arrested. For this they were committed for trial. On Tuesday the case came up for trial in the Court of General Sessions. An officer went to Williams' residence to bring her to Court. He found her a mere skeleton, a realization of the last scene in the "Traviata," almost dying. She was carried to Court. Both women pleaded guilty to an attempt at grand larceny, and sentence was deferred until the Spring Term of Sessions, when, if they behave themselves meanwhile, they will be sentenced to the State Prison. Recorder Hackett, in passing sentence, said that if these women had been tried for petit larceny, instead of grand larceny, the sentence would have been ten years long; and if Mary Anne Taylor, the oldest arrest record, New-York female thief, received but one year on Blackwell's Island, while Ellen Williams, a dying woman, receives a State Prison sentence, or, in plainer words, a certain death sentence, for a crime of which both women were equally guilty, it seems to be a case of

THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

The Removal of Night-Soil from the City—Petitions Against the Manhattan Company—The Usual Weekly Statistics.

Before the Board of Health, yesterday, all the boss night scavengers and their employes presented themselves to resist the monopoly known as the "Manhattan Odorless Excavating Company," to which the Board have given the exclusive right to cleanse all vaults, cesspools, &c., of this City. The Secretary of the Board read a communication from the Clerk of the Board of Assistant Aldermen, inclosing a resolution passed by the Board, inquiring by what authority the Board of Health transferred the business of cleaning vaults, &c., from the regularly licensed night scavengers, and placed it in the hands of one or two individuals. The communication was referred to the Committee on Law and Ordinances.

A memorial in favor of the Manhattan Odorless Excavating Company, and to bear the signatures of over 2,000 citizens, was presented and, together with the memorial against the Company read at the last meeting, was referred to the Sanitary Committee.

Two memorials were then presented, remonstrating against placing the work of the night scavengers in the "hands of the monopolists." One memorial was from the night scavengers, who complained that they were thus thrown out of a business which they had been prosecuting for years, and in which they had invested their capital, and the other was signed by some 300 laboring men, thrown out of employment by the action of the Board. These memorials were referred to the Sanitary Committee, who promised to give an opinion for the memorialists a hearing on Friday next, at 4 P. M. A large number of affidavits were also presented, setting forth that the water for use in Batten's Company was impure, and unwholesome, and these were also referred to the Sanitary Committee.

A communication was received from the Presidents of the Sixth and Eighth avenue, and the Broadway and Seventh-avenue Railroad Companies, asking for a hearing in regard to a modification of sections 172, 173, 174, 175 and 176 of the Sanitary Code in relation to the proper construction of the cars. The matter was referred to the Sanitary Committee.

The following is a comparative statement of contagious diseases for the two weeks ending Oct. 12 and Oct. 19, 1872:

Oct. 12—Typhus fever, 4; typhoid fever, 21; scarlet fever, 25; measles, 1; diphtheria, 23; small-pox, 2.

Oct. 19—Typhus fever, 7; typhoid fever, 18; scarlet fever, 25; measles, 1; diphtheria, 34; small-pox, 2.

The Registrar of Records reports as follows:

During the past week there were registered 66 deaths, being at the rate of 1,650 per year, a slight increase over the preceding week, and an excess of 8 over the corresponding week of last year. Zymotic diseases occasioned 16 deaths; paralytic, 5; organic, 11; inflammatory, 14; parasitic and violent causes, 21. The total cases of small-pox diminished from 3 to 2, those of scarlatina from 19 to 15, those of diphtheria and croup from 23 to 24, those of typhoid fever from 21 to 18, those of scarlatina fever from 4 to 4, those of cerebro-spinal fever from 1 to 1, and those of diarrheal diseases from 13 to 16. There were 2 deaths from measles and 3 from typhus fever, being several days after the cases had been reported. The mortality of typhoid fever rose from 4 to 11, and that of scarlet rough from 3 to 4. Typhoid-malarial fever was credited with 4 deaths, phthisis pulmonalis with 11, and other forms of tuberculous affections 42, against 73 and 56 respectively in the preceding week. Nineteen deaths were due to brain's disease and to paralysis; 4 to heart disease; 10 to diseases of the lungs; 1 to pleurisy; 2 to diseases of the liver; 1 to cancer; 1 to dysentery; 1 to diarrhea; 1 to cholera infantum; 1 to cholera; 1 were certified by Coroners, 2 were suicidal and 1 were occasioned by accident or negligence; 214 deaths were of children less than 5 years old, and 31 were of persons 70 years of age and upward.

The Cesspool Department of the Sanitary Company of Police reports the following amount of night soil, fish, &c., seized and confiscated as unfit for human food: Shad, 1,000 pounds; veal calves, 2; veal "bob," 1; beef, 86 pounds; poultry, 42 pounds; fish, 850 pounds.

Rumored Theft of Vouchers—Inquiries in the City Department Hall to Establish the Truth of the Story.

A rumor was in circulation on the street, yesterday, that some important documents had been stolen from the City Hall or County Court-house. As evidence in the shape of vouchers is preserved by the authorities for use in the trial of the Ring thieves, the rumor was deemed worthy of investigation. A careful inquiry was instituted among the officials in the various buildings without success. Controller Green informed the TIMES reporter that he had heard of no theft of documents in his Department. There were many offices and rooms in his Department, however, and a robbery in some of them was possible but not probable. He had taken every precaution to prevent such an occurrence, warned by the last great voucher robbery, by having iron shutters placed on the windows, and the watchman cautioned to keep a sharp lookout. He was satisfied that no robbery had been committed. Assistant District-Attorney Allen said that no robbery had taken place, to his knowledge, in the District-Attorney's office. He had in his charge a large number of indictments and much documentary evidence bearing upon the Ring cases, but he had not missed any yet. It could not be ascertained that any papers were lost in the Mayor's office, and the records in the Register's office were pronounced secure by the Deputy Register.

The Bienville Investigation Concluded.

The investigation into the loss of the Pacific Mail steam-ship Bienville was continued yesterday. The statement of Mr. George W. Bailey, one of the passengers, who had charge of a boat, being an old sailor, was submitted in evidence. Mr. Bailey's statement has already appeared in these columns.

John Gaff, second mate of the Bienville, was the first witness examined yesterday. He commanded the boat referred to by Mr. Bailey as bringing the sailing directions and the compass to him. He escaped with the Captain, first mate and purser, in the single boat remaining, and she was so deeply laden they could not reach these boats after they gave off more lightly laden. The Captain wished to distribute some of his officers among them, but they could not get near them.

Arthur Howland, seaman, briefly corroborated the testimony as given in Mr. Bailey's statement.

Robert Becket, steerage steward, testified that he left the ship in the second boat she had eleven men, four women and six children in her. They afterward picked up the chief steward, who had been lost out of the boat stove beside the ship. They had a dozen or more loaves of bread and one keg of water, but subsequently got some more water from the Captain's boat. Their boat had in her all she could say carry. Thirteen of the passengers got ashore; the others were lost in the breakers.

This concluded the investigation.

Burglary in Ninth-Avenue.

At about 2 o'clock A. M. yesterday, Officer Phelan, of the Twentieth Precinct Station, saw in the grocery-store of H. & H. Brien, No. 438 Ninth-avenue, a light. He also observed two burglars, and entered the place. He arrested one of the burglars, but his confederate succeeded in making his escape. It was then ascertained that the burglars had forced out the panels of a side door leading from the hallway into the store, and were then compelled to cut their way through a large quantity of soap piled against the inside of the door. The prisoner, who gave his name as David Martin, was locked up at the West Thirty-seventh-street Police Station, and on being arraigned at the Jefferson Market Police Court was committed for examination.

Manslaughter in the Fourth Degree.

Patrick Clifford, charged with murdering Mary Anne Gallagher, was brought up for trial yesterday at the Court of General Sessions. The testimony for the prosecution consisted principally of the deposition of the deceased, taken on her death-bed. She alleged that her refusal to comply with a request of the prisoner caused him to kick her in such a manner as to produce serious injuries. These injuries resulted fatally. Medical testimony was given in corroboration of this, but it was not clearly made out that the woman came to her death through the prisoner's violence. The jury rendered a verdict of guilty of manslaughter in the fourth degree, and the prisoner was sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labor.

Tricks of the Packers in Smyrna.

From the Detroit Tribune, Oct. 21.

A prominent drug house in this city received, a day or two since, a consignment of opium from New-York, which was originally imported from Smyrna. They have opened one small box containing thirteen ounces, which cost them $3, and have found that three ounces in the weight are represented by three leaden bullets, resembling in a dead heat of $2 to the firm. They now feel somewhat uncertain about opening the other boxes, lest they should be found still more heavily charged with bullets.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Who Are Republicans?

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Very many Republicans have, as yet, failed to be registered. This includes a number who, heretofore in previous elections, were always early in this important duty. The reason, very generally, is born of over-confidence; if so, it is a terrible mistake.

Please, sally, in different parts of your widely-read journal, all the attractive of reason to this vital matter. The citizens of the Republic have never had a ticket, National, State and Municipal, stronger or more meritorious than the one they are now called upon to sustain in November next, and the majority should be overwhelming.

The three essential things to be remembered are:

A FRIEND OF A FIRM AND HONEST GOVERNMENT.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Oct. 23, 1872.

Women Murderers.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your article today on Mrs. Enit is a most excellent one. Your remark that when women place herself on an equality with men and should when criminal be subject to the same punishment, is as sound as anything can be.

Your remarks in regard to woman's having a special punishment is the only weak point of your article. There is no sense in the sentimentality which pretends horror at women appearance on the scaffold; defenselessness has no application to the case; a man in such a position is just as helpless as a woman. There is no reason why the sexes should not be treated the same.

Apathy in Registering.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The Twenty-seventh Election District includes both sides of Thirty-second street, the north side of Thirty-first and south side of Thirty-third streets, from Broadway to Madison-avenue, also the east side of Broadway, both sides of Fifth-avenue, and the west side of Madison avenue, from Thirty-first to Thirty-second street. In this district there are still about one hundred voters who have not registered, and I presume the same apathy exists in many other of the districts which are largely Republican. Please sound the alarm to rouse forward, and register, and not wait until the very last day. Yours, etc., T. D. S.

A Recent Accident.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your "Minor Topics" editorial on the unfortunate disaster upon the Eastern Railroad, which occurred yesterday morning, at Seabrook, N. H., you say, "It seems hardly possible, had the most improved kind of switch been in use on the Eastern Road, that the lives lost yesterday would have been sacrificed."

During the past seven years I have traveled many times each Summer over the Eastern Railroad, and have scarcely failed to examine the road-bed and rolling stock of all the railroads I travel over. I can say from personal observation that the main track of the Eastern Railroad is provided with the best switch in use, viz., the pass or safety switch, from which a train cannot run upon the ground, no matter when way it be thrown. The fault, therefore, was not in the character of the switch employed.

By inserting this you will do justice to a railway which, despite this unfortunate occurrence, has done more to improve its track, convenience for travel and rolling stock during the past year than any other in New-England, and will also oblige, yours respectfully,

A. W. VILAS.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Oct. 23, 1872.

James W. Husted.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The remarkable pertinacity of James W. Husted in forcing his renomination upon the people of the Third Assembly District of this county is only equaled by the duplicity and trickery of the tools employed to do his dirty work. This was illustrated at a recent caucus meeting at Sing Sing to elect district delegates. The majority of the people of the town are in favor of reform, and consequently opposed to the pretensions of the late member from this district, but the willing tools of the honorable gentleman played a trick upon the people. Mr. J. H. Hall, United States Assistant Assessor, called the meeting at 8½ o'clock, an unseasonable hour, when few working men could attend, and with only about twenty persons present. Mr. James Williamson, Postmaster at this place, forced the names of a set of delegates upon the meeting, under the protest of many present. This was done by intimidating persons who are candidates for appointment at the State Prison. Will Mr. Kirkpatrick and Judge Graves, if elected, look to this matter?

Are these persons, in perpetrating a fraud upon the Republican electors of this town, working in the interest of the general ticket, or in Gen. Dix and the State ticket to suffer in the interest of Mr. Husted? If the people of this district can have a fair election, and Mr. Husted defeated, there only resource is the advice of the NEW-YORK TIMES—defeat such candidate at the ballot-box.

A GRANT REPUBLICAN.

SING SING, Monday, Oct. 14, 1872.

The Rents of Refuge.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

A daily paper of this City has recently made some very just comments upon the gang of young ruffians that infest our City.

They were spoken of as youth without a lingering vestige of innocence; who rob and outrage women and children, using knives and pistols without restraint; and who murder with as much relish as a band of grown-up outlaws. In view of the munificent provision made by the State for molding and reforming these elements, we are led to inquire why is this permitted? The House of Refuge, established more than a half century since by wise and benevolent men, was designed to meet the exigencies of the case described.

How well the institution has fulfilled the design of its founders the records abundantly testify. Young men and old from every part of the country, and from every department of human activity, are almost daily returning to its halls, and testify with singular unanimity that their first steps toward truth and a virtuous and honest life were taken when being subjected to the care and discipline of the institution. The work still moves on, with its accustomed energy and skill. Not in a stereotyped routine; for as the result of years of study and observation, the managers have recently supplemented the methods of former years by the organization of a new department—yet entirely in harmony with the general spirit of their former arrangements—which, from results already attained in dealing with a class of larger boys, makes it not only a distinguishing feature in the work, but, if thoroughly developed, will place the institution in the front rank of reformatories in this country.

At the present moment there are accommodations and appliances for 350 boys and 200 girls, and yet there are only half that number there, while boys are prowling the streets of our City committing outrages and crimes that may well excite universal alarm. Again, a few days since the officers of the Penitentiary and State Prison were strongly condemning the idea of sending more boys to their institutions, who, while serving out their sentences, were being made adepts at crime, because they are without any educational facilities or any incentive to industry or reform, only desiring to return to their old haunts of infamy and crime as soon as released. Nature and humanity cry out against this. The voice of compassion and sound policy dictates the withdrawal of the rod of penance, as the prison doors close upon the young and unwary, who are sent to mingle in the congregation of the reprobate and abandoned, where no example is seen to reclaim, and no secrets of Christian love are heard to save.

Now, this somebody is decidedly wrong in this direction of youth from an institution designed especially for them, and to which they legitimately belong—from an institution whose records bear so abundant testimony to the most satisfactory results—blessed is such—whose—every patriotic and benevolent person must plainly see. Who is this? Who will answer? It is very suggestive that within a few months the Court of Special Sessions of

THE NEW-YORK TIMES,
New-York City.

It is rather unlucky for the Greeley factions that they cannot agree in their opinions as to the Mayoralty contest in this City. The World thinks that Mr. HAVEMEYER has certainly been put up as a "dummy" in the interest of Senator O'BRIEN, and the World, as we know, is always right in politics. It was right about the German and French war, (predicting, as it did, the utter overthrow of the Germans;) it was right about the Tammany Ring, (defending it down to the last moment;) it was right in advocating the Code Amendments bill; it was right in predicting an immense majority for BUCKALEW in Pennsylvania; and clearly it was right in arguing, in a long series of articles, that it would be ruin for the Democrats to take HORACE GREELEY as their Presidential candidate. If, then, the World is right in its inferences with regard to Mr. HAVEMEYER, its Democratic colleague, the Tribune must be entirely wrong, for that paper says that Mr. O'BRIEN has been thrown overboard. Suppose these eminent authorities were to meet in a room and talk the subject over! They might then hit upon one interpretation of the puzzle, and not be contradicting each other flatly every day.

It is instructive, by the way, to notice the extreme respect with which Mr. O'BRIEN is now treated by the Tribune. A week ago he was a "jail-bird"—everything that was vile. Now he is "Mr." or "Senator" O'BRIEN, and he is treated to an immense quantity of soft-sawder every day—and why? Because GREELEY'S representative thinks that he can be enticed to support GREELEY. The Professor's attacks on Mr. O'BRIEN were as unjust as his present toadyism is contemptible. Mr. O'BRIEN did a great deal better in the last session of the Legislature than the Tribune's friends—much better than ALVORD, for instance—and he is absolutely innocent of all the charges brought against him by the Tribune. But for the paper which did bring these charges to prostrate itself at his feet in the abject manner we now behold, is a spectacle which future Professors of Journalism will present to their pupils as a type of everything to be avoided by the young writer who desires to make the "best of both worlds."

Our Brooklyn readers must not forget that the last day for registration in that city is on Saturday next. All who neglect to register themselves on that day lose their votes. a matter that should concern every citizen having the best interests of his country at heart. Don't fail to register, if you have not already done so.

The Bar Association has simply given expression to the opinion of all respectable lawyers, in intimating its sense of the unfitness of GUNNING S. BEDFORD to occupy the position of City Judge. It is time that the reform candidate should be placed in nomination. Judge SUTHERLAND'S name has been mentioned in connection with the City Judgeship, and should it be found possible to concentrate all sections of Reformers in his support, he would certainly be elected. That he would do honor to the position, nobody who is competent to give an opinion can have the slightest doubt.

To-morrow and Saturday are the last days for registration in this City. Voters should understand and remember that if they fail to register now they will not be permitted to vote in November. Every man desirous of reforming our State and Municipal Government should attend to this duty at once. If you neglect to register on Friday or Saturday, you have effectually disfranchised yourself.

The citizens of the Tenth Congressional District are invited to attend a mass-meeting to ratify the nomination of Mr. WILLIAM A. DARLING for the House of Representatives. The meeting will be held to-night at the hall of the East-side Association, corner Eighty-sixth-street and Third-avenue, and will doubtless give unquestionable indications of the determination of the Republicans in the district to elect their nominee for Congress. Hon. GEO. OPDYKE will preside, and speeches will be delivered by the reform candidate for District-Attorney, Mr. BENJAMIN K. PHELPS, by Gen. BRUCE, Hon. Mr. CLAPP, Mr. DARLING, and others.

"The fight is over. There is no necessity to register, or to attend meetings, or to subscribe toward expenses, or to take the trouble to vote on the 5th of next month." That is the sort of talk now going on among too many of our Republican friends, and very foolish talk it is. Most of our readers will admit that if the Republicans deliberately stay away from the polls next month, the Democrats will win. We shall have a fresh moral to the old fable of the hare and the tortoise. It is upon this overconfidence of the Republican Party that the Greeleyites (Mr. SAMUEL TILDEN among them) are now building their hopes. They think they can snatch the victory from us at the last moment, simply through our own carelessness—and it cannot be denied that many victories have been carried in that way. Mr. TILDEN thinks that Mr. GREELEY is a fit man to represent the Democratic Party, that he would make a good Democratic President, and therefore he hopes to elect him. Will our friends understand that we can only beat this scheme by persevering and untiring work, right up to the very dawn of Nov. 5? We really think the loss of Pennsylvania would have done some of our people good.

Among the most noteworthy accessions to the supporters of GRANT and DIX is Hon. ISRAEL D. HATCH, of Buffalo. He has been elected to many offices of trust by the Democrats, and has been a member of the Legislature, and of Congress, and of the last Constitutional Convention. He is widely known in business circles as the champion of the free-canal policy. His declaration for the Republican ticket is but an expression of that silent confidence in the merits of the Republican candidates which will make their triumph overwhelming.

The purport of the Emperor WILLIAM'S decision on the San Juan boundary has been sent from Berlin by Mr. BANCROFT. The essential point in the decision is, "that the claim of the United States of America is most in accordance with the true interpretation of the treaty of June, 1846." This disposes of all the sensational reports which have been circulated upon the subject, and is another triumph for the nation and the Administration which negotiated and carried out the provisions of the Treaty of Washington.

Six or Kernan.

The difference between Gen. DIX and Mr. KERNAN is most marked with reference to their war "records," and to the associations by which they are likely to be influenced on the question of reform. On this latter point there is little room for well-informed persons to differ. Gen. DIX commands the entire confidence of all engaged in the reform movement. He has been in public life for years, and has made to reform the most valuable of all contributions—absolute fidelity to public trusts. He has never been a partisan politician; he has always been superior to the influences of partisan politics, and has preserved an unqualified independence in every position he has occupied. He cannot obtain today, by any act of which he is capable, the support of a single leader of Tammany. On the other hand, there is not one sincere friend of reform who would not trust him completely.

Of Mr. KERNAN, it is difficult to form any such opinion. He is the candidate of the Tammany men, and was named by them for the purpose of satisfying the element of the Democratic Party that HOFFMAN could not command, because of his action in the Orange riots. The Tammanyites, moreover, knew by experience that they had nothing to fear from Mr. KERNAN. They tested his mettle at Syracuse last year, when his friends and neighbors relied on him to purify the party by barring the way of TWEED into the Democratic Convention, and it was soon discovered that he was entirely harmless. We hear a good deal of certain legal assistance he rendered in the prosecution of the Ring. It is not this kind of opposition that the Ring fear in a prominent politician, such as KERNAN has always been. They know that he dares not defy their political power, and that what he would not and could not do in a political Convention, he could not do in the Executive Chamber at Albany. A plot was formed at Albany last Winter to gain control of the Legislature, in order to defeat all reform legislation and reopen the way to the Treasury. The men who nominated KERNAN for Governor were the authors of that plot. They would not have chosen him, we may be sure, if they had supposed he would be their foe. It is very obvious that they would not have chosen JOHN A. DIX. The people cannot do better than go exactly contrary to the plans of these old party hacks.

The contrast between the records of Gen. DIX and Mr. KERNAN, during the war, is very conclusive. No one doubts where Gen. DIX stood. There has never been any question as to the value of his services to the country. He may be said to have enlisted for the war when he entered BUCHANAN'S Cabinet, and he served throughout in the bold, unflinching spirit of his famous order. We are reminded by the journals of the Democracy that Gen. DIX was not engaged in active campaigning, but we may be sure that these very journals had the liveliest appreciation, at the time, of the fact that his vigilance, discretion and fidelity were as formidable to traitors as if he had employed these qualities in the field.

As for KERNAN, he presents the curious spectacle of a patriot requiring affidavits to prove his patriotism. On the long list of "War Democrats" who indignantly repudiated the course of their party, and made common cause with their former opponents in defense of the Union, Mr. KERNAN'S name is not found. He placed it there voluntarily, for a purpose in 1863, when he probably felt that the Union was sure to win, but he withdrew it when he got into Congress. On this point the opinion of the Tribune in October, 1864, when it aided in defeating his renomination, is conclusive. It said:

"But in 1862 he was nominated and supported under pledges that he would give a vigorous support to the war, and to the Administration in prosecuting it—pledges which he did not scruple personally to make and conspicuously to violate. There is not a more unvenomed Copperhead in the present Congress. Even military fear of his Republican constituency did not deter him from voting generally with PENDLETON, LONG, HARRIS & CO., against most war measures, and when he did not venture to vote on that side he generally dodged. In short, his election was a fraud, grounded in treachery and false promises, and consummated by wholesale bribery, and he ought long since to have resigned."

According to the Tribune, Mr. KERNAN, then, is a scheming, unscrupulous demagogue. That is precisely what, at this juncture, the people of this State do not want for Governor.

Disrupted Delusions.

This canvass will be remembered for a long time as the one in which several delusions, hitherto widely accepted, came to an abrupt end. Mr. GREELEY and his friends have made use of a good many, and they will perish with the "Liberal" movement.

One is the delusion, long nursed by politicians, that "the masses," or "the people," are a collection of enthusiastic men of weak mind, who instinctively prefer the worse to the better man, if the worse one is only sung about, and burrahed over, and lied about with sufficient persistency. It was this delusion which secured Mr. GREELEY his nomination. No considerable part of either Convention—that at Cincinnati or that at Baltimore—believed him a superior man. But they thought that in some mysterious way, from almost every motive except real confidence in the man, the voters would accept him, and would go mad with enthusiasm concerning him, in inverse proportion to his fitness for the position. They have found out their mistake.

Another delusion, which will never again play so important a part as heretofore, is the one that Democrats will be guided in their voting entirely by the Democratic Conventions. The miserable error made in this regard by the Democratic leaders has been gradually forcing itself on their minds, ever since that sharp, short, and decisive struggle in North Carolina, where the change in the Democratic vote, in spite of the most desperate efforts to retain it, must have been well nigh ten thousand. The Eastern States repeated the dismal lesson with more convincing illustrations, and the thirty-five thousand in Pennsylvania, and the forlorn outlook in Ohio and Indiana, have completed it. From this time forward, Democrats will do their own thinking in national politics to an extent not before known for many years.

A third delusion, which will not survive this campaign, is the notion that a widely-circulated newspaper can carry its readers with it wherever it chooses to go itself, without regard to its own consistency or theirs. The people will stand a great deal of avowed cynicism and indifference to morals in some of their journals; but they will not tolerate palpable hypocrisy.

A fourth delusion, which will be given up hereafter, to some extent at least, is the idea that a public man's reputation depends on what his enemies say, and not on what he himself does. Gen. GRANT has been assailed more virulently and widely than any man was ever known to be in our political history. He would not and could not reply. He was not himself a talker or a writer, and he took no pains to have others speak or write for him. What his friends chose to say in his defense has been voluntary and unsought. Gen. GRANT has been vindicated by the truth. Certainly, the young men of our country could have no more splendid example of the value of action, as compared with the value of pretense, than is afforded by the life of the President. Among all the great American names, there is none greater than that of the quiet, modest, sincere man, upon whom the people are about to confer the Presidency a second time.

Every honest and sensible man may unqualifiedly rejoice in these results of this canvass. They all tend to make politics purer, more honorable, and capable of greater good to the country. If politicians are made to respect the sense and sincerity of the people, if the people become more careful and sincere with themselves, if the Press is taught a lesson in candor and consistency, and if the sting of calumny is broken by the vindication of its latest and worst-abused victim, who will deny that the country is the better for the unpleasant experience of the last six months?

Truth According to the Tribune.

Precisely what amount of reliance is to be placed upon the veracity of Mr. GREELEY and his organ has been fully illustrated in their controversy with the Poughkeepsie Eagle and Hon. T. T. FLAGLER. When Mr. GREELEY was first accused of an attempt to bribe a member of the Thirty-fourth Congress, on behalf of CORNELIUS WENDELL, he met the charge with the following "authorized" denial:

"Mr. Greeley never asked any one to give Cornelius Wendell either printing or binding, or to vote that he should have either.

Mr. GREELEY never had any business transaction of any kind with CORNELIUS WENDELL, never received any money from him, nor paid any to him, and does not know that Wendell ever offered or paid money to any one for either printing or binding."

But when the member to whom the bribe was offered comes out with a flat contradiction of Mr. GREELEY'S statement, that eminent reformer and truth-teller is compelled, through his organ, to make this admission:

"He (Mr. Greeley) did say to Mr. Flagler that Wendell was willing to pay for the job, which proved it to be profitable."

First, Mr. GREELEY solemnly declares that he was entirely ignorant of the fact that WENDELL was willing to pay for the binding contract, and then he admits that he knew that WENDELL was willing to pay for the votes that should secure him the job. Of course, it follows that the "authorized" statement in the Tribune of Oct. 14 was a willful and deliberate untruth. Comment on this latest achievement of the Tammany candidate and his organ is unnecessary.

Having been convicted of bearing false witness on the fact of the offer having been made, Mr. GREELEY need hardly complain if the public refuse to believe his testimony in regard to the object with which he made it. He says (and in so doing contradicts all the professions of himself and his organ, as to their considering political assessments a crime against the State,) that he intended that the money should go into the Republican treasury for the Presidential campaign then opening. He certainly gave no hint of this to Mr. FLAGLER, whose testimony is above all suspicion, but left that gentleman under the impression that he had been made the subject of an appeal to a cupidity from which he was happily free. The destination of the money does not, in either case, change the aspect of the affair, nor will it change the popular verdict that will be passed upon it.

Now, seeing how very badly Mr. GREELEY has come out of a transaction which he boldly met with "specific contradiction," does anybody suppose that the case against him in regard to TWEED'S tobacco business is not even worse, since he has steadfastly abstained from attempting any defence in regard to it? A similar conclusion is inevitable in regard to his disposal of the Des Moines bribery fund, about which he has also preserved an obstinate silence, although it formed the subject of investigation by a Congressional committee. Mr. GREELEY was conveniently absent in the West when his presence was needed before that Committee. His supporters would, doubtless, have preferred that in the accusations touching his conduct as bribery agent for CORNELIUS WENDELL, he had once more allowed judgment to go by default.

The Reading Railroad.

A lease of the Catawissa Railroad to the Reading Railroad Company is in process of negotiation, and will probably soon be completed. The transfer is to be for the period of 999 years, which, setting aside the rather absurd legal fiction involved in these figures, means, of course, that the lease is to be practically a perpetual one. The terms appear to be very just and fair, and the arrangement seems likely to be profitable to both parties. All railroads may be divided in four classes; those which lease others, those which are leased by others, those which both lease and are leased, and those which are run simply on their own account. The last of these divisions, though for a long time the only kind known, is now so rapidly disappearing that in a few years, if things go on as they are at present going, there will be almost nothing of it left. The Reading Road belongs to the first-mentioned class though in this respect it is incomparably behind its powerful neighbor the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The history of the Reading Railroad presented, for many years, one exceedingly singular feature. We allude to the contrast between the way in which the stock was bought and sold and the manner in which the road itself was worked. For a long time the word "Reading" among brokers was eminently suggestive of the operations of bulls and bears, while the same word, as referring to the track and trains, was, among railroad men, equally indicative of careful, steady and economical management. It is not easy to account for the great and frequent fluctuations in the value of the shares of so well conducted a road; but one reason may, perhaps, be found in the fact that the practicability of carrying, at a profit, heavy freight on railroads which were brought into competition with water transportation, was, until very lately, considered by the public exceedingly problematical. That question is now settled, and either this or some other cause has given a very different complexion to the stock, which is becoming more and more sought after for permanent investment, its employment for speculative purposes being thereby, we are happy to say, rapidly and effectually diminished.

The construction of the Reading Railroad, for the purposes for which it was designed, was a marked event in the progress of civilization. It was the first great attempt in the history of the world at transporting a cheap and bulky article by land in competition with advantageous water carriage. The experiment was a bold one. Apart from all other considerations, the amount of capital needed to lay a railroad ninety miles long, over a route much of which required a great deal of rock cutting and other heavy work, was, thirty-five years ago, a matter of no small importance. Men had not then begun to reckon by millions with the calmness and facility with which they do now. Large figures frightened them. But the experiment was made, and though, by no means a remunerative one to many of the original stockholders, was of incalculable benefit to the internal commerce, not only of our own country but of all other civilized nations.

The tonnage of the Reading Railroad has, ever since the road was completed, been greater than that of any other road in the United States, and also, if we are not mistaken, greater than that of any road in Europe. At present, more than six million tons of coal, besides a large amount of other freight, are annually carried over the main line. To give some idea of what is indicated by these figures, it may be mentioned that if this whole quantity had to be transported at once, it would require a train of cars reaching at least half way from here to San Francisco. The freedom from accident with which the road has been worked has, especially when we consider its immense business, been wonderful. We do not remember a single case of a passenger having been killed who was in his seat, where he ought to be.

At any rate, the name of the road—although it has been so long in operation and there has been such a multitude of coal-trains on it, any one of which, by the slightest carelessness, might have obstructed the way of a passenger-train in such a manner as to cause a fearful collision—has never been associated with any such scene of slaughter as is brought to our recollection by the name of many a road not doing a twentieth part of the same amount of business. A fact like this is worthy of serious attention. If the Reading Road, with its numerous curves, its many embankments, its tunnels and deep cuts, and its multitude of coal-trains, can carry passengers with this degree of safety, why is it not practicable for some other roads, that might easily be mentioned, to do the same thing? For ourselves, we confess that we can see no answer to this question, and what is more, we do not believe that any satisfactory answer can be given.

Fish and Steak.

The London Times has been discussing the question of food, and pointing out the enormous waste which, in spite of the high prices of the necessaries of life, continually goes on in England. The remedy which the Times proposes as a means of making food cheap and plentiful is the adoption of fish and rice as the chief articles of the poorer Englishman's diet. Dr. LIEBIG'S extract of meat is also strongly recommended—but it must be the pure extract.

Rice, which constitutes the daily, and almost the only, food of millions of the human race, and which, in addition to being wholesome and palatable, is exceedingly cheap, has never met with favor among the branches of the Anglo-Saxon family. Why this should be the case it is difficult to understand. Possibly the average man scorns the modest manner in which a cup of rice offers itself as a sufficient dinner for a grown man, and contemptuously declines to test its capability of swelling under the influence of water until it fills four or five times its original space. To fish, on the contrary, no Anglo-Saxon really objects. Every man eats it at intervals, and likes it, but somehow fever dreams of making it an important article of diet. That the Englishman does not live on rice might, perhaps, be explained on the theory that he found it tasteless. That he does not live on fish, which he does like, and which is wonderfully cheap, is susceptible of hardly any plausible explanation.

To change the current of English prejudice from beef and potatoes to rice and fish, will be a difficult task. The Press, if it went into the crusade, would accomplish something, and a charitable society for the diffusion of fish, and the propagation of rice-puddings among the working classes might accomplish more. The efforts that have lately been made to stock the rivers and lakes of England with choice varieties of fish will, at no distant day, so increase the supply that the price of fish would probably increase but slightly, even were the whole British nation to abandon its beloved joints and adopt a fish diet, while a temporary abandonment of beef on the part of the British public would at once bring butchers either to reason or ruin.

In this country the people are more readily led to change their habits, and it would be comparatively easy to convince the poorer classes of this City that they would find fish as wholesome and vastly cheaper than poor beef and miserable veal. The tons of fish that are daily wasted at the market would supply hundreds of families with cheap dinners, while a little effort on the part of the idle boys who now infest the wharves for purposes of theft and riot, would result in catching a respectable supply of wholesome, if not particularly choice, fish. It is an undeniable fact that neither in England nor in America do the people avail themselves to any considerable extent of the inexhaustible resources of the seas and rivers. Once let it be understood that fish is at least as wholesome and sustaining as butcher's meat, and there will be no reason why communities within reach of fish-bearing waters should suffer from scarcity of food. Fish, rice, and Dr. LIEBIG'S preparations ought to be much more extensively used in families than they are now.

The Caterpillar Crew.

It is a favorite theory of certain philosophers, devoid of faith in anything except in the infallibility of their own deductions, that the present century is remarkable for the Decline of Faith. Many thoughtless persons who read the positive assertion that Faith, with a capital "F," has Declined, with a capital "D," are conquered by an assertion made with so much certainty and such a commanding use of capitals; and are seriously troubled as to the future of all religions except that ingenious system invented by M. COMTE, and which presents the simple creed of a denial of God, immortality, and the existence of the soul. Such timid persons need only look into the columns of the rural Press to be convinced that faith is still in a condition of vigorous vitality. For there they will find abundant evidence that in the present century not only do people accept any quantity of theological creeds, but that they actually place confidence in auguries drawn from the conduct of caterpillars and the manners of moles, with as little hesitation as was evinced by the ancient Romans who pried into the mysteries of futurity as he investigated the entrails of sheep, and shaped the policy of the State by the wandering flight of migratory geese.

Already it has been announced all over the country that the ensuing Winter is to be a severe one, owing to the fact that furry caterpillars are now abundant. It would be in vain to point out that these caterpillars will retire into cocoons and contemporaneous insensibility long before winter makes its appearance; and hence, unless they are of an impudently meddling disposition, can have no possible concern with the Winter months. The belief that the furry caterpillar controls the thermometer is far too strong to be shaken by any such argument. Moreover, we are assured that the beaver has lent his aid to the cold-compelling caterpillar, and is busily engaged in putting his dams and dwelling-houses in a condition to withstand the coming cold. It would be a mere waste of time to ask the bucolic editor how he reconciles the two theories that the caterpillar and the beaver each possesses unlimited control over the weather. Between these two controllers of the climate there is no sympathy or concert of action, and inasmuch as the beaver makes a point of dining on the caterpillar, it is reasonable to suppose that the insect regards the quadruped with a coolness which would prevent them from arguing, even upon so trivial a topic of conversation as the weather. What, then would be the result if the beaver decided upon having a severe Winter, while the caterpillar advocated an unusually mild season? And yet such a clashing of conduct would be extremely likely to ensue, were it true that the Winter is wholly in the hands of these two independent powers.

Clearly it is useless to argue with the follower of the beaver and the disciple of the caterpillar. It is equally useless to give way to a feeling of annoyance that a man, possessed of sufficient intelligence to conduct a paper, should really put faith in such preposterous prophets. We can only regard him with a sad curiosity, and consider that since Nature has made him thus, it is not for us to revile and ridicule him. He can, on the contrary, be made useful as an evidence that in spite of Positivist philosophers, faith is by no means on the decline. As such, then, let us use him, and when we are told that faith is dying out, let us proudly point to the Sheboygan Bugle and the Oshkosh Banner, and triumphantly read the paragraphs which profess implicit belief in the meteorological power of the caterpillar and the beaver.

MINOR TOPICS.

A correspondent calls attention to the failure of many Republicans to register in the Twenty-seventh Election District, and another gives it as a general fact that many Republicans, hitherto among the first to discharge this duty, have held back this year. Whether these omissions be the result of apathy or overconfidence, they ought to be promptly remedied. Failure to register means disfranchisement at the election, and the cause of reform, whether in City, State, or nation, cannot afford to lose votes from such a cause in November. Registration, either to-morrow or Saturday, is not one of those things which a man may do or leave undone at pleasure. It is a duty which he cannot neglect without betraying the solemn trust of citizenship, and deliberately taking sides with the friends of corruption.

In the course of the Harlem Court-house investigation, yesterday, it appeared that a receipt had been signed for "fifty spruce two-inch planks," which were said to have been delivered at H. W. GENET'S new house, though apparently charged for as materials to aid in the construction of the Court-house. The witness who signed the paper could not account for the "mistake" which testified to the destination of the planks. It is to be hoped that enough "mistakes" of this kind will be discovered to leave the Senate Committee no room for hesitation in regard to the verdict which they ought to bring in regarding this notorious job.

As we have before remarked, nearly one-half of the Assembly districts in this City already show a registration equal to seventy-five per cent. of the vote of last year. Now, it is safe to say that the vote of last year, large as it was, ought to be considerably exceeded this year in every district, save in a few of those down-town, where repeating was not quite a lost art last November. When we find, therefore, in certain districts in which the party of reform is strong, that there are still to be registered thirty-five to forty per cent. of the voters, to bring the number up to those of last year, we may fairly conclude that only one-half of the legal voters of those districts have yet been registered. Friends in the cause of reform, the Eighth, Tenth, Eleventh, Sixteenth and Seventeenth Assembly Districts are in this position. Your associations are formed for work; see that they undertake this business, which lies close at their hand, and get their friends to register to-morrow, to enable them to vote on Tuesday week.

Says the World of yesterday: "It was Mr. TILDEN who conceived and executed that master-stroke by which Controller CONNOLLY was so suddenly ousted and Mr. GREEN put in his place." However this may be, it was the World which applauded said "master-stroke" by a good deal of rabid abuse, in the course of which Mr. TILDEN was somewhat contemptuously designated as a "railway politician and lawyer," while Mr. GREEN was charged with being "accessory to CONNOLLY'S swindles," and his acceptance of the position of Deputy Controller was called "the most marvelous prostitution of a pure reputation that we ever heard of." We should imagine that the support of the World is one of the last things an honest man would think it desirable to have, and its singular readiness for being on the losing side is well calculated to encourage Reformers.

The satire evinced by Col. MCCLURE, of Philadelphia, in selling out the furniture, and closing the "Liberal" head-quarters for Pennsylvania after the recent election in that State, has been imitated by Greeley and Brown campaign clubs elsewhere to a very considerable extent. The most recent case of this kind occurred at Peterborough, N. H. The members of the "Liberal-Democratic" club of that town have improved upon the McClure idea by selling out to the Grant and Wilson Club. The flag which formerly contained the names of GREELEY and BROWN, now hangs in front of the Grant head-quarters. Greeleyism, by this move, received its death-blow at Peterborough. The Democrats are particularly disgusted at the turn things have taken, and many of them declare that they will not vote either one way or the other at the coming election.

Much good is likely to accrue from the published account of the injuries which were inflicted on Col. STOCKTON, of Pennsylvania, in the frequent attempts made to secure the detention of that gentleman in a lunatic asylum. The report of the Commissioners of the Insane in Vermont, the last scene of the Colonel's tribulations, states that the Asylum at Brattleborough is in a wretched condition as to healthfulness. In his own words, "the patients are kept in a damp, dark, underground basement, where the air they breathe must be more or less impure, in despite of the great care which is observed in its purification. From fifty to one hundred of the most hopeless and incurable are treated in this place." A special committee has just commenced the work of investigating this matter, with the view of spreading all the facts before the public in due time. Meanwhile, much excitement has been occasioned by the Commissioner's report. Whatever the result may be, the management of the institution is sure to undergo a change for the better. Inquiries of this nature, when conducted by the proper men, are always advantageous.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Struggle for the Office of Marshal of the Supreme Court—Tennessee Election—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The office of Marshal of the Supreme Court will become vacant by the qualification of Mr. Parsons as a member of the House of Representatives, to which he has been elected in Ohio, or perhaps sooner, by his resignation. There is a lively contest developing for the succession, though the efforts of several of the candidates have been well concealed up to the present time. The Marshal is appointed by the Supreme Court. The candidate latest announced is Mr. H. J. Ramsdell, correspondent at this point for the Cincinnati Commercial and New-York Tribune. Mr. Ramsdell is said to have substantial reasons for being sure of the support of Judge Miller. Judge David Davis he regards as also favorable to him. He is fearful that Mr. Parsons' influence will be used in another direction. And to prevent this, and secure the favor of Judge Chase, is understood to be the task to which he is now addressing himself. This is regarded as the key to the position, and Mr. Ramsdell finds it a little hard to lay hold upon it, because Mr. Parsons was elected as a Republican candidate after an exceedingly hard struggle, which Mr. Ramsdell's pen helped to make harder. The result will be watched with interest on "newspaper row."

REPRESENTATIVE MAYNARD'S ELECTION ASSURED.

Ex-Supervisor Emery, of Tennessee, writes to a friend here that the re-election of Mr. Maynard to Congress is assured. This will be good news to the many friends of Mr. Maynard, who have been looking upon his contest as close if not hopeless.

AN EXCURSION TRIP.

About sixty persons, representing the Veteran Legion of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, arrived here from Pittsburg this morning by the 9 o'clock train of the Baltimore and Potomac R. R. road. The Company is commanded by Gen. A. D. Pearson. They were received by the Veteran Union of this city, and the Marine Band.

RESULTS ON FREE LABOR.

There are now in the Freedmen's Savings Bank and its branches, principally in the South, an aggregate of deposits of over $3,000,000. Recent reports telegraphed hence as to the unsoundness of the institution have no foundation in fact.

A CHANGE OF LIGHT-HOUSES.

The Light-house Board gives notice that the light in the old tower at Bolivar Point, north side of the entrance to Galveston Bay, will be extinguished on and after the 15th of November, and a third order fixed white light illuminating the entire horizon will be exhibited on and after that date from the new tower now being erected about half a mile distant, and bearing west-south-west from the present light-house.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE IN ORDER TO VOTE.

The Secretary of War has granted the clerks of his Department eight, ten, or twelve days leave of absence, respectively, to go home and vote at the Presidential election; those living in the more remote States having the longest leave of absence.

A FATAL ACCIDENT.

A water-main in Georgetown, D. C., burst this morning, and John Koontz, a workman, while going down into the hole to cut off the water, was overcome by foul air, and suffocated almost instantly.

LARGE PURCHASES OF AMERICAN COAL BY ENGLISHMEN.

Several hundred thousand tons of American coal have recently been purchased on orders transmitted from England to the United States. The greater portion of these purchases is of the soft or bituminous coal of Maryland and Pennsylvania, as the consumption of that kind of coal, which greatly resembles the English production, is much greater in Europe than that of anthracite or hard coal. A large number of these English orders will be filled at the Cumberland mines. Several vessels have already left Georgetown, in this District, with cargoes of soft coal for foreign countries, and others are expected to arrive and clear before the close of navigation.

REGATTA AT PEEKSKILL.

A Spirited Contest Between Three Well-Known Oarsmen—Ten Eyck the Winner by a Quarter of a Mile.

From Our Own Correspondent.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Wednesday, Oct. 23, 1872.

The aquatic season of 1872 on the Hudson closed at Peekskill this afternoon with a three-mile shell race. There were three prizes, the first $100, the second $20 and the third $25. The contestants were Gilbert Ward, of Cornwall; James Ten Eyck of Peekskill, and Jarrett Raymond, of Sing Sing. Ward rowed in the English-built shell Argonauta, which weighs thirty-five pounds. It is the one with which Eglen beat Hill Ward at Hyack. Jimmy Ten Eyck rowed the Jenny Ward, built by George Mahr, and which weighs thirty pounds. Raymond rowed the Enoch Carter, formerly owned by Ten Eyck, and which weighs thirty-five pounds. Ward and Ten Eyck's boats have the sliding seat. All three of the rowers pulled cross-handed. At exactly 3 P. M. the contestants made their appearance in their respective boats and were assigned positions, Raymond outside, Ten Eyck in the centre and Ward inside.

As soon as the men got well in line, the judges gave the word. Ten Eyck got the best of the start, by long odds, but Ward recovered quickly, and shot away, Raymond starting last. The heart of Ward's friends almost dropped out of them when they saw their favorite—after having disregarded all instructions—pull away to the north ward, directly in the line of Peekskill drawbridge; but he had made a fatal mistake, and it could not be recalled. Ten Eyck, seeing his advantage, and knowing all the whirls and eddies of the course, pulled like lightning, soon overhauling Raymond, who had taken a direct course for the drawbridge, and passing him. Turned the boat to advantage at the stone two, Ward second and Raymond last. Coming home, Ten Eyck had everything his own way, Ward rowing as far to the south ward coming back as he did to the north ward going out, while Raymond was nowhere. Ten Eyck came home all of a quarter of a mile ahead of Ward, winning the first prize in 24 minutes and 25 seconds. The time, all things considered, was good, but Ten Eyck's friends say he rowed over the same course on Monday in 21 minutes.

REPUBLICANS' GRAND RALLY

Another Great and Enthusiastic Mass-Meeting at Cooper Institute.

Speeches from Pol. Reid Smith, Gen. Noyes, of Ohio, and Others—Immense Enthusiasm—Announcement of the Last Meeting.

Another grand Republican mass-meeting was held last evening at the Cooper Institute, and, like all of its predecessors, was characterized by a very large attendance and the utmost enthusiasm. The meeting was called to order by Hon. Alonzo B. Cornell, who announced that next week's gathering would be the last of the series, and that the speakers on this occasion would be Secretary Boutwell and Speaker Blaine. Mr. R. Deinfield Smith was unanimously called to the chair. In an able and argumentative address, the Chairman pointed out the issues involved in the present contest. The leaders of the Liberal Republican movement say that they acquiesce in all the principles for which the people under the lead of the Republican Party have long contended, and they say that in acquiescing they are better to be trusted to carry out those principles than the men who wrote them in the fundamental law of the country. He did not propose to detain them by argument, but pointed to the illustration recently presented in Georgia where the Constitution and its amendments, giving citizenship, and equality, and right of franchise to all men alike, were openly violated, and the men driven from the polls at the point of the bayonet. They deemed it sufficient that these glorious principles were written in the statute-book, and were like the people who favored the Mathe law, but opposed its execution. But they say they are for amnesty. Now, the President and Congress of the United States granted amnesty to every rebel who participated in the rebellion, except members of Congress, members of our Ambassadorial corps, those who were educated at West Point and Annapolis, and who exercised their position against the interest and liberty of their country. That was the proper consideration of the question, and the triumph of rebels, Democrats and disaffected Republicans would be the defeat of all the loyal and good men of the nation. They talked about the one-term principle. Henry Clay was once in favor of the single term, because of his dislike to Mr. Van Buren, but he was satisfied upon reflection that it was better to leave it to the people, and certainly the people were wise when they refused to re-elect Tyler and Pierce and Buchanan, and they were wiser yet when they re-elected Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln, as they will re-elect Gen. Grant. [Cheers.] There was no other great principle for which the coalition contended except that of unlimiting the most popular and greatest man that had produced. He referred to the attacks made upon him for receiving presents as a reward for his services at the close of the war, and was proud, he said, to know that when McClellan was candidate for the Presidency in 1864 the publican was known enough to spurn him because his military abilities were similarly recognised. The speaker warmly defended the President against the charges of nepotism, &c., and continued to say that Horace Greeley's election was sought because of his honesty. There were men in this the world as dangerous as those who have Quixotic, chimerical and unreliable opinions of government, and still are honest men. They say that he is a philosopher. He was willing to admit it, but his reading always led him to believe that it was the duty of philosopher to make experiments, and the duty of statesmen not to make them. So let him remain a philosopher, and let him be re-elected to the New-York Tribune, for it needs his assistance. [Cheers and laughter.] Mr. Smith spoke of Mr. Greeley's ability as a journalist in laudatory terms, but remarked that from the moment war commenced he seemed to think that everything for which he had contended was gone. On the contrary, as the contest raged, the bravery and the certainty of success grew in the heart of Grant, and he struck harder and harder until the end. [Cheers.] For his part, he was willing to welcome honest Democrats to the fold. He remembered how gallantly thousands of young Democrats sacrificed their lives for the service of their country, and he believed that honesty and sterling patriotism had not entirely departed from their party. As for reconstruction, he went back to the time of James Monroe for a President. Let every man vote for Grant, and we will be a united people. [Cheers.]

SPEECH OF GOV. NOYES.

Gen. Edward F. Noyes, Governor of Ohio, was then introduced and said: The smoke of the recent conflict in the three great Central States—Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, [cheers]—has now cleared away, and the dust of the battle upon either side have had time to gather up the dead and wounded, to estimate the number of comrades who are missing, to count the prisoners of war, and to arrange themselves for the order of battle for the general engagement along the line which will take place on the 5th of November. [Applause.] It is a very gratifying consideration that once in four years the American people have opportunity to pass judgment upon the conduct of their public servants, to decide what policy shall control the Government during the succeeding four years, who shall administer it, and by what principles it shall be guided. We are now drawing near the close of a very remarkable political campaign; such a one, I will venture to say, as you have never known before. Heretofore, we have always had an adversary found opposed two great political organizations, representing distinct and antagonistic ideas of principles or public policy, [applause,] but now the Democratic Party, once the pride of patriots and statesmen, has gone to the grave of the friends, and, I regret to say, has been buried by its own hands. [Applause.] As I survey the situation I am reminded of a painting on the walls of the grand stairway leading to the Museum of Berlin, entitled the battle of the Huns. The idea is that the battle lasted so furiously during the day, and the combatants were so exhausted and so terribly excited, that they could not rest at night, and so they are seen rising up from the blood-stained earth to fight over again their battles in the air. As the heroes of the old Democracy, now dead and gone, receive spirit from the action of the Cincinnati and Baltimore platforms, they come back to the country and begin once more to fight over again in the air the battle of the Huns. But this is all a humbug and a miserable sham. These leaders only hope that the Democratic corpse will be galvanized into life again by the so-called Liberal Republican batteries. It is only a temporary galvanism, out of which they hope it will spring into active and vigorous existence, animated, as before, by a spirit of evil, bent upon overwhelming all the grand accomplishments of the last twelve years, and seeking to perpetuate its power by betraying the best interests of the country. [Applause.] I am not here to abuse Democrats. I have not forgotten the bravery of thousands of young Democrats who died for the Union, but speak only to those who love country above the success of a political party. [Cheers.] A single week before the adjournment of the Baltimore—the story of its measures, the sum total of its success. It sprang into existence in 1866 out of the necessities of the time, and so, as we believe, ordained of God to subserve a great public purpose, to save, with other loyal men, the integrity of our country and the honor of our flag during four years of bloody war, and when that war was over to reorganize and purify and ennoble the country, and to start our people once more grandly forward on the pathway of happiness and prosperity. [Cheers.] Has Grant betrayed any great trust? Has the Cabinet for which he is responsible, neglected any great public duty or trampled on the rights of any, even the humblest citizen of the United States? All I claim for Grant and his Administration is this: That you shall judge him and it by the results, and be by any preconceived notions of what was proper in the case. [Cheers.]

Gov. Noyes continued to say that when Gen. Grant was elected he found many of the Federal offices filled with men who had proved recreant to their duty and neglectful of the best interests of the country. Some of these were very properly made, and those men, so turned out of office, became hostile to Gen. Grant, and subsequently hostile to the Republican Party. And there were many applicants for office who were disappointed in their expectations, and they also became hostile to Gen. Grant and the Republican Party. And then there was a little squad of men, headed by Charles Sumner, who seemed to think they were senior partners with the Almighty, and ought to be consulted on the revolutions of the spheres. But Gen. Grant did not seem to be overawed by them. He did not permit them to control absolutely the affairs of the Government, nor to dictate what he should have for breakfast, nor what time he should eat his dinner, and so these men became the enemies of Gen. Grant and hostile to the Republican Party. Now, Gen. Grant was a plain, blunt man, but little accustomed to the ways of politicians, not very well read in the arts of diplomacy, not very well educated in the use of sugar-coated phrases, which otherwise were intended to conceal the bitterest thoughts; and when he learned that his enemies were advancing on him, he met them as he did in the war, half way, and so overcame them. [Applause.] When Grant was elected there were the Ku-Klux scattered through the South, numbering not less than five hundred thousand men. It was their business to murder unarmed men, to drive away from their homes every one who was known to be loyal to the United States. The Ku-Klux laws were passed, those bands were destroyed, and the Southern people became more prosperous than they had been for twenty-five years. He spoke to many who had been soldiers, and they could remember who had been their friends in the South during the war. It was the colored men, and the plain duty of the Government was to see that their rights were secured. The States might protect them if they would, but if they did not then the strong arm of the Federal Government was to do it. So much for the Ku-Klux and the Ku-Klux law. Against the Republican Party, said today: "We will protect all alike, black and white, rich and poor, native and foreign born." And yet it was for doing that that the Democrats complained of the Republican Party. Then as to the question of amnesty. Every man in the country—even Jeff. Davis—had the right to vote. Only those who voted for no amnesty and no forgiveness, were prohibited from hold office. Ah, but the earnest people of the South, Mr. Greeley had threatened to recall them up; how, he did not know. Many of them might be thieves, but the Republican Party was not responsible for them, or for what the Government came to the South and. The Administration was neither responsible for their election nor their retention in office. Let the South be more tolerant and it would be happier to get rid of the present troubles. Gen. Grant had striven to maintain peace and had succeeded. [Applause.] He had seen more enough of the country soaked with the manhood's best blood to wish for war, and the Alabama Claims were settled, and Gen. Grant's Administration, by their settlement, inserted the good will and the God-speed of the whole civilized world. His Indian policy was conducted in the plainest interests of economy and of humanity. If it ever proved to be a failure, why then Phil. Sheridan could be sent out to settle the question in another way. [Applause.] Turning to the subject of Gen. Grant's inauguration of reform in the civil service, the speaker said what could be expected for it if Horace Greeley were elected. Then, under Grant's Administration, three hundred and forty-eight million dollars of the public debt had been paid off. United States bonds had increased in value, and the country was never more prosperous than it was today. [A voice, "No."] Let them go to the little State of Ohio, and see. If they were not satisfied in New York, why not go West? [Applause and laughter.] Was this success or was it failure? There was hardly a working man in New-York who was not buying his plot of ground now, and who, next year, would not have his little home upon it. There were twelve hundred millions of United States bonds held across the water, and if Mr. Greeley were elected they would come back; he'd be sold, not at par, but for what they would fetch. Did they want such a state of things as that? Then look at the confidence that was felt in the currency. He ventured to say that there was not a man in that hall who knew what bank the dollar bill was on which he had in his pocket. [Loud applause.] Referring to the charge of "nepotism" against the President, the speaker termed Carl Schurz a brilliant adventurer, and Charles Sumner a learned mulattoe. That charge, he declared, was a mighty small business. As to the charge of receiving gifts, Gen. McClellan, they would remember, received one hundred thousand dollars, but it was for being whipped by the rebels. [Applause and laughter.] while Gen. Grant received that sum for whipping them. [Renewed applause.] But he heard cries of "Go on." After urging every man to do his duty as a citizen in November, Gov. Noyes brought his remarks to a close.

The Chairman then introduced Gen. Adam E. King, of Philadelphia, who said he had observed the doctrine of State's rights, who had four times in the army and four times wounded when fighting for his country, and whose votes and vote, since the war, had been in the direction of the bravery which he then displayed. Gen. King was loudly cheered as he rose.

SPEECH OF GEN. KING.

He thanked the audience for its kindly greeting, and, at the outset, expressed the hope that instead of the area of the conciliatory party had been broken in North Carolina, and its legs in Vermont, that in November New-York would crush out its heart. [Applause.] He said that he had been at the Baltimore Convention, and a sorrier sight he never saw. There was no genuine enthusiasm in it except when the band played "Dixie," and that tune always brought out a genuine rebel yell. He affirmed that there were no Liberals left in the recent movement; a certain number of dissatisfied Republicans had joined the Democratic Party, and that was all. Democrats complained of Republicans for what they called oppressive legislation for the South. He had heard the evidence given at some recent Ku-Klux trials in North Carolina, and could assure his hearers that they had no idea of the horrors which were there brought to light. And it was for representing outrages like those that the Administration was charged with despotism and a tendency to centralization. Mr. Jefferson Davis said that he left the Union that he might not be ruled by a numerical majority of the ballot-box; but that question had been settled at Appomattox. [Applause.] If his Democratic friends were afraid that their rights were in danger because life and liberty had been protected at the South, he would remind them that Mr. Greeley was an abolitionist when the laws which secured those blessings to every man in that part of the country. Having disposed of the only question at issue, the one left was of a personal character. Mr. Greeley, as they were aware, was "unstable as water," while the country knew where Gen. Grant stood—all sincere genotics. Then, Gratz Brown, the second on the Democratic ticket; the Blairs proposed to run him, which was a sufficient reason why no one else should touch him, even with a forty-foot pole. Gen. Grant was the most misrepresented man in the country, and many believed there was nothing in him on that account. Too speaker administered a stern rebuke to Mr. Greeley for his slander of the soldiers who met at Pittsburg, and said that he believed peace and reconciliation would come more readily obtained by a cordiance in the Executive chair of Gen. Grant. He eulogized the purity of life and honesty of conduct of Gen. Dix, and asked if Mr. Kernan were a true man, why had not he proved it when the life of the nation was endangered? If he was enlisted in the ranks of loyalty, his fame had never extended beyond the borders of his own State. If he were a copperhead during the war, he was not the man to govern now, when a Dix or a Robinson could be got in his stead. [Loud applause.] The issue, the speaker went on to say, was between the most erratic and unreliable man that could be found, and the most reliable one. Which would his audience choose?

Gen. King was loudly cheered in the course of his speech, and a vote of thanks was passed to him; and to Gov. Noyes before the meeting adjourned.

FROUDE'S FOURTH LECTURE.

Association Hall Crowded Last Night—Emigration from Ulster—Irish History from 1782 to the Union in 1800.

Yesterday evening Mr. Froude delivered his fourth lecture at Association Hall, to an audience as numerous as on other occasions, though the rain fell fast, and the streets were detestably muddy. The lecturer entered punctually at 8 o'clock, but his cortége of friends was greatly curtailed, and there was a thin attendance on the platform. The lecture was extremely interesting from the original matter it contained, which Mr. Froude had unearthed from the English State papers. He commenced by saying that the natural remedy of Ireland, in the state to which she had been reduced, was revolution. If she could have risen as one man, and vowed that either such a state of things should cease or all her sons should die, she would have been free, and all the nations of the world would have clapped their hands and cried "Well done." What Ireland could not do, America did for her. To that country had gone thousands of sturdy Irish Calvinists, burning with the wrongs that Episcopalianism had inflicted on them, and determining to avenge the wrongs done to them. To these wrongs was now added that of eviction at the detestable hands of the middlemen. The very year that the Bostonians threw the famous tea into their harbor, Ulster had sent an unusually large and fiercely-excited quota of emigrants to America, principally to New-England. These men were forced out of their country, which had once been called the garden of Ireland, on account of what has been called tenant-right. They were mercilessly evicted because they had improved their property, the landlord deeming that such improvement belonged to him because he had permitted it, and not to the man who had made it. The result was that when these men emigrated to America there was not one of them able to handle a musket who was not fiercely opposed to England, and eager to avenge himself for the long series of wrongs that had been heaped upon him and his since the restoration of Charles II. At that time, no matter what may be the case now, the Protestants of Ireland were disaffected, and the Catholics were perfectly loyal, as their address to Sir John Ellaquere, in the time of the American Revolution, will abundantly prove. The Viceroy, in a letter to Lord North, wrote that in spite of the character of the Irish representation, in spite of its being composed of great estate holders, he had with difficulty obtained a vote condemning the action of the colonists in America. The Presbyterians of the North, he writes, are Americans in heart, and their strength increases daily. This, in the language of an English Viceroy, may be considered sufficient evidence of the fact that the Catholics of Ireland, in those days, were by no means the warm friends of this country. England, during the American war, was surrounded by enemies on every side; by the French, by the Dutch and by the Spanish, but she bore herself as a way that must ever make the heart of every Englishman thrill with just pride. She could not conquer America, but she could give such an account to those haughty neighbors of hers as satisfied them that her grasp of empire had not slackened. The Irish had to be pacified, and they were pacified. The commercial trade laws were repealed. As Junius says, a law was pointed out as bad in construction, and vicious in action, it was condemned, and everything was done to make Ireland satisfied that the English heartily desired to be good friends with their Irish cousins. During the last year of the war with America every soldier was withdrawn from Ireland, and the Irish demanded arms to protect themselves. They received them, and thus sprang into existence the Volunteers of Ireland. Henry Grattan demanded a separate authority for his country, and, amid the salvos of cannon and the shouts of fifty thousand volunteers, the Constitution of 1782 was granted. "Into parliament and Grattan, whether the people spoke over heard in College Green, the life of the Irish Parliament. But it was not to last. If Ireland had been left to herself, if she had been permitted to construct her own industries, it might have been well with her. If the Russian Colossus had been unencumbered with serfs, they might have left Ireland altogether free, and allowed the Protestants and the Catholics to fight their own battles. The advantage in point of numbers was certainly with the Catholics, but discipline, arms, money, and union were with the Protestants; and the struggle would in all probability have ended in the extermination of the Catholics, without the agitation of the Celtic Caudillos. The Constitution of Henry Grattan, though it gave political freedom, brought no home reforms to the unhappy country. It stimulated no industries; it did not relieve the peasant from the yoke of the landowner; it created no market for produce. Next year, in the account of an eyewitness, the whole land was cursed with misery and the people were starving. Neither did judicial freedom promise any better, and the Irish House of Commons, instead of helping Ireland, simply used its position to embarrass English politics in hopes of bribes or actual bribes of gold. Grattan might thunder in tones of eloquent indignation. Curran might liken a corrupt politician to a dead dog floating in a sewer, but no one heeded; no one deemed for a single hour from soliciting bribes for their votes. Such was Ireland when the smoke of the burning Bastile astonished the eyes of Europe. In the Irish House of Commons all the seats were held by Proceitants, and they were sold openly for $10,000. Many noblemen owned ten, twenty and thirty boroughs, and sold the votes on important questions to the English for money or for titles, of which the Irish were as fond as children are of fine dresses. An attempt at reform had been made by the Duke of Leinster and the more moderate Liberals. But, though all admitted the necessity of reform, no one could agree as to what reform should be in this Whig Club. At this juncture the French revolution changed the aspect of everything. To the more ardent spirits this seemed the opening of a millennium, and even the rule of the Jacobins had failed to cool their enthusiasm. But all others were horrified, and looked about every where for allies to face the tempest tempest that threatened Europe. The Catholics, who hitherto been suspected, became now objects of friendship as likely to respond to the conservative banner. But the voting men of this party, like Emmet and Wolf Tone, were thoroughly imbued with the revolutionary spirit, and had no thought of stopping where Grattan had halted. They wanted a republicanism as in France—or the American model. The Catholic landed gentry wanted their rights, wanted the repeal of the disability bill, and, when being pressed, were disposed to stand by the government. Only part of them, however, for there were many, who were deeply affiliated with the lodges of the United Irishmen which Emmet and his friends had formed throughout the country. Another party was composed of peasants who banded together as defenders, and wanted to extort from the landlords potato patches at something less than the seven guineas an acre which they were charged. Of the northern Presbyterians who were so strongly republican, there were sworn in at the least 100,000. Of the Catholics there were double that number. They were armed, and they seemed to be unanimous—the Northern Protestant at last heart to heart with the South-ern—and Bonaparte, who had shown a desire thoroughly into the contest with Jacobinical France, and from the opening successes of the Republicans it was plain that the contest would be a long one. The French sympathized with the Irish, and had sent them arms and had even promised to send an invisible Gallic army and invincible troops to help any republican movement in Ireland. Then if ever was the Irish opportunity. But from the first it was obvious that there was something rotten about the United Irishmen. Wolf Tone, who started the society, was greatly theatrical in thought, and by no means of the stuff of which patriot leaders are made, though not unsuited to the leading articles that occasionally appear in newspapers. The programme of the United Irishmen was no sooner published than it was sold to the English Government; the most active conspirator was Tone himself. On its issue, as on that of Grattan, there has never been any state. He was not a strong man, but he was a true republican, faithful and honest in his aims and his wishes. But, as the conspiracy went on, papers were written in cipher, and, in the secret acts of treason were committed, and arrests began to be made. Mr. Jackson, a clergyman, was arrested and would have been hanged only he took poison and fell down dead at the door. Wolf Tone fled to America. Lord Edward Fitzgerald fled to Continental where his wife, the famous Pamela, had a house in Hamburg. There the Irish leaders met the emissaries of the Directory. An Irish patriot turned traitor, sold the secrets of the conspiracy to the English minister in Dowling-street, and committed suicide in Newgate. The Government obtained a series of fatally-criminating letters, so that the whole affair was completely in the hands of the English long before it started. The Irish leaders worked well and skilfully, and actually sent hundreds of United Irishmen into Ireland as sailors on the French fleet, to sow disaffection among the sailors, and they actually were instrumental in creating the famous mutiny at the Nore. Hoche, the General of the French Directory, was sent by Carnot to land a force of ten thousand men in Ireland, but the winds being adverse, he did not land, and returned to France. The Dutch fleet then, by the advice of Wolfe Tone, made an attempt to land at Antrim, but the sailors of the Nore fleet were now pacified, and burned to redeem themselves, and they destroyed the Dutch fleet at Camperdown. Then the English thought the time had come to attack the United Irishmen, and the chief lodge where the leaders met in Dublin was surrounded by the police, and they were captured. Lord Edward Fitzgerald was absent, but he was arrested in a drinking house, and being wounded in a desperate conflict with his captors, died in prison. Then the peasantry rose in masses disjointedly, here and there, under their inferior leaders, and the rebellion became a mere Catholic crusade against the Protestants. The Protestant Volunteers fraternized with the United Irishmen, and between the men of Ulster and the Catholics, and those men whom Wolf Tone had declared to be the right arm of the republican movement changed their United Irish lodges into Orange lodges, and became the right arm of the Scottish to put down the movement. He needless to talk of Wexford Bridge or Vinegar Hill, or to detail the paltry tactics of the peasants under their priestly leaders. They were put down easily by the militia of the country and by English soldiers, and the movement ceased altogether with the capture of Wolf Tone, in a French ship, and his suicide in a prison-cell. Thus ended the rebellion of '98, after eighteen years' trial of the Constitution of 1782, and of Grattan's noble efforts of patriotism. To clamor against England for putting down this rebellion would be too idle. Those nations are only fit to be free who can tolerate no disorder, and who, to place that the time had not then come when the Irish were fit. The Irish House of Commons sold the country, and the United Irishmen sold each other. Nowhere was any cohesion or any sense of honor to be found, save among the victims who perished so cheerfully. The history then showed that Ireland, though unfit for independence, was entitled to justice, and this was rendered by the Act of Union which followed. This, though carried through by the most unblushing bribery, was essentially for the benefit of Ireland, and conferred upon that country all the benefits which Englishmen enjoy, with the advantage of lower taxes. He concluded by saying of the Union what Grattan had said of the Constitution, "Esto perpetua." This brilliant termination was loudly applauded by an audience that had followed this entire discourse with extreme attention and interest, the allusions to America and her struggle being received with unbounded approval.

Departure of the Presidential Party for Washington.

President Grant, Mrs. Grant, Nellie Grant, Frederick Grant and Master Grant left the Fifth-avenue Hotel, yesterday, for Washington. Gen. Porter and Secretaries Robeson and Delano accompanied the party. The President's family were much worried for nearly an hour over the loss of their little boy, who had strayed away. He was found at last, however, and the party left the City rejoicing.

The Late Bond Robbery.

OFFICE OF THE SAFE DEPOSIT COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, NO. 146 BROADWAY, CORNER LIBERTY-ST.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

A wrong impression having been inadvertently given by several newspapers that a gentleman, Mr. O'Connor, lost a large amount of securities on his way from this institution to his banker's, allow me to correct the error.

Mr. O'Connor was not on his way from this institution.

It is news to me, and will be to our thousands of dealers, that, as some of the papers state, "numbers of persons have been recently followed from the Safe Deposit Company," &c., &c.

The accommodations offered our dealers for handling their securities in our many separately inclosed desk-rooms, render these removal from our premises so unnecessary that few of our renters do remove them except for negotiation; and when they do, it is the established custom of the office to remind them of the risk of carrying them out, and to suggest the great caution, knowing that the premises of all moneyed institutions in the City are more or less watched by thieves.

A policeman is always in front of our premises to warn of any pickpockets or suspicious-looking characters who may be loitering in the neighborhood, as well as to assist ladies or others into or from their own or public conveyances, or to cross the streets.

The public are greatly indebted to the energetic action of our consulting detective, Mr. Sampson, late of the Sub-Treasury, for the recent arrest, conviction, and imprisonment for a term of years of one of the most dangerous of the class of criminals.

Yours obliged, very truly,

FRANCIS H. JENKS, President, &c.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The principal transaction at the Exchange yesterday, Wednesday, Oct. 23, was that in charge of Cadwallader Waters, D. M. Sessman, auctioneer, who, by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of Edward B. Smith, Esq., referee, disposed of the following City real estate: Premises No. 48 Rooseveltstreet, west side, between Cherry and Oak streets, containing a lot 25 by 91.6, with a four-story frame house, with two-story frame extension in rear thereon, sold to Joseph Tilles for $9,300; one lot, 25 by 100, on the east side of Second-avenue, between Fifty-second and Fifty-third streets, sold to Joseph McGuire for $7,400; and one lot, 25 by 102.3 on the south side of Fifty-fifth-street, 275 feet east of Second-avenue, sold to August Hoselin for $6,300. The three first, under the same decree, also disposed of the following Brooklyn realty: One three-story brick house, with store and lot (the latter 20 by about 40) on the northeast corner of Tillary-street and Hudson-avenue, sold to John Fritzsche for $4,600. One three-story brick house and lot (lot 22.9 by about 80) on Hudson-avenue, east side, 80 feet north of Tillary-street, adjoining above, sold to Henry Mechaley for $4,050; and two four-story brick dwelling and lot (lot 18 by 81.9) on Tillary-street, north side, 46.8 feet east of Hudson-avenue, in rear of above, sold to Timothy Hennessy for $4,600. Muller, Wilkins & Co., at a trustee's sale, offered at auction the new five-story brown-stone front French-flat houses, and lots, situated on the west side of Lexington-avenue, forming the block front between Fifteenth and Fifty-first streets, two of which were knocked down to Abram May, as follows: House and lot, north-west corner Lexington-avenue and Fifteenth-street, lot 23 by 60, house 82 feet deep, for $24,100; house and lot on Lexington-avenue, adjoining above on the north, lot 24 by 60, house same depth, for $18,500. The sale was then stopped. The probable cause of this failure arises from the fact that in the advertised notice of auction it was stated that the houses, now nearly completed, would be delivered finished, on easy terms. At the auction yesterday, however, it was announced that a change of terms had been agreed upon by the trustees, namely, that the sale would be for cash, and that purchasers would be required to finish their own houses at a cost of from $3,000 to $4,000. This threw a damper on the whole proceedings, and, as a consequence, the results were entirely unsatisfactory. The executors' sale in charge of A. J. Bleecker, Son & Co., of the business properties No. 97 Fort-street and No. 40 Ferry-street, did not take place, as expected, the auctioneer stating that, for private reasons, the executors had for the present withdrawn the property from the public market. The other auction of the day, viz., legal sale by James M. Miller of property on West Twenty-eighth-street, near Ninth-avenue, was postponed to today. No further business was transacted, with the exception of stock auction, duly noted below.

The further sale, by order of Sheriff Simonds, N. J., on Tuesday, Oct. 22, of D. A. D. Mellick, Jr., & Bro., was but slimly attended and the lots were not sold, as negotiations are in progress for the disposal of the entire tract at private sale.

Today at the Exchange the great event of the week will be the sale of the well-known and popular, Wilkins & Co., as which the thirty-six ville plots, hereafore referred to, located on Fordham Heights, will be offered—an exceedingly valuable property and a sale which is regarded by capitalists as one of special importance. Several large real estate sales will also be held, at which quite an extensive list of desirable real estate, principally improved, will be brought forward.

At private sale the following recent transactions are reported: By Friedman & Leopinesse, No. 119 Broadway, four lots on the north-west corner of Sixty-second-street and Fifth-avenue, sold in one plot for $60,000; triangular plot, 61 by 145 by 35, on the north-west corner of Fourth-avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-sixth-street, sold for $7,200. Eight lots on the west side of Ninth-avenue, between Two Hundred and Sixth and Two Hundred and Seventh streets, sold for $6,000; eight lots on the north-west corner of Two Hundred and Fifth and Academy streets (Dyckman tract,) sold for $6,800, and four lots on the south-west corner of Two Hundred and Fifth-street and Vermilyea-avenue, sold for $3,500. By Bunting & Atkinson, No. 120 Broadway, ten lots, embracing the southerly half of the block bounded by the Grand Boulevard, Eleventh-avenue, Seventy-sixth and Eighteen streets, four of the same being on the Boulevard, four on the avenue and two on the street; sold as one parcel for $380,000.

THE
CHICAGO AND CANADA
SOUTHERN
FIRST MORTGAGE SINKING FUND
THIRTY YEARS
7 PER CENT. GOLD BONDS.

INTEREST PAYABLE APRIL AND OCTOBER. REGISTERED OR COUPON PAYABLE IN LONDON OR NEW-YORK.

This road, with the Canada Southern, forms the new Trunk Air-line from Buffalo to Chicago. It is under the same control and management, and is being built by the same parties who built the Canada Southern: Milton Courtright, John B. Trask, David Dows, Wm. L. Scott, Henry Farnam, R. A. Forsyth, John M. Burke, M. L. Sykes, Jr., all directors both in the Chicago and North-west and the Chicago and Rock Island; George Opdyke, of the New-York Mill-land; Sidney Dillon, Daniel Drew, John Ross, David Stewart, Samuel J. Tilden, Kearon Ogden, and other prominent railroad men. The road is being rapidly built in the best possible manner, with sixty-pound steel rails throughout its entire line, and will be completed during the coming year; nearly one-half of the road will be completed and in running order by the 1st of January next, so that the entire line, from Buffalo to Chicago, will within that time, be in successful operation. The builders of this road control enough of the leading lines running from Chicago to insure an enormous business from the start. Taking into consideration the important fact, patent to all who study the statistics of trade, that the present Trunk Lines, now taxed to their utmost capacity, are not affording facilities equal to the great and constantly-increasing demand for transportation, and that this road, through its entire length, being practically STRAIGHT AND LEVEL, and SHORTENS by THIRTY-FIVE MILES THAN BY ANY OTHER NOW BUILT, or THAT CAN BE BUILT, it must be apparent that this line is not only needed, but must be a great success. The proceeds of these Bonds will complete and equip the entire road, and we confidently recommend them as a most safe and profitable investment.

Lake Ontario Shore R.R.
7 PER CENT. GOLD
FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS

At 90 and Accrued Interest.

Issue $60,000 to the mile, in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000. The entire issue is undertaken with subscriptions to the Capital Stock of over $2,000,000. Sixteen miles of the Road are finished and in operation; 44 miles in addition fully graded, and a total length of 85 miles of track will be laid this season, while the whole Road, of about 150 miles, with the exception of 8 miles of easy work, is mapped out and contracted to be finished by responsible and wealthy parties within the coming year.

The Road will extend from the City of Oswego to Lewiston, on the Niagara River, with branches to Suspension Bridge and Buffalo, connecting at the Western terminus with the Great Western, the Canada Southern, and the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroads, and at Oswego with the New-York Midland, and by way of the Midland with the proposed Boston, Hoosac and Oswego Railroad, which, when built, will then provide a route from Chicago to Boston 70 miles shorter than by any existing or contemplated line, connecting also at Oswego with the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg Railroad, and thence by the Vermont Central in complete connection with the entire railroad system of Northern New-England; while connections at Oswego with the Syracuse and Oswego Railroad, secures access to the coal fields of Pennsylvania.

With these connections a large through business is secured. Running through populous towns and villages, and a rich agricultural district, its local business alone will continue to take care of the interest on the First Mortgage Bonds. The assessed value of the farm property of the six counties through which the road passes is $194,319,052
Annual production is $14,482,360

We confidently commend the above Loan as one of the most attractive and reliable ever offered. For sale by

THE HORSE EPIDEMIC.

Alarming Spread of the Disease in this City and Brooklyn.

Thousands of Horses Temporarily Disabled.

Partial Suspension of City Travel Anticipated.

Twelve Excited—Gazelle, the Trotter, Laid Up—Reports from All Sections.

The fear of a fatal result of the distemper now prevailing among the horses of this city has created much consternation among horse dealers. There is hardly a public stable in the City which is not affected, while a majority of the valuable horses owned by individuals are for the time being useless to their owners. Many of the car lines and stage routes have been forced to drag off some of their vehicles, and to lessen the trips of the remainder, and even with this relief the horses remaining well are overworked. The livery and boarding stables have also been attacked, and a large number of trucks are already thrown out of use or drawn by animals afflicted with the distemper. It was not uncommon along the streets of the City yesterday to see horses dragging along with drooping heads, and at intervals coughing violently. The same was the case with the high-bred teams of uptown fashionables, although it was often difficult to distinguish those affected with the epidemic, as one of the chief symptoms—the "droop" of the head—was disguised by the cruel check rein. The disease seems to have made its appearance here on Saturday, but did not become by any means general until yesterday, when every car and stage stable in the City was affected. It begins with a labored, half-suppressed cough, which rapidly increases in violence, and is accompanied by fever, intense heat of the mouth, whenever dry or moist, and a running from the nose and eyes. The horse attacked refuses all food, but evinces no disposition to lie down. Of the modes of treatment, homeopathy appears to be in most general favor and to have been used more successfully. This mode of treatment consists in the administering of five drops of aconite, immediately on the discovery of infection, licorice being also given to clear the throat. Aconite and licorice combined are continued at intervals doses until the animal recovers or otherwise. The allopathic system is more varied, and, of course, advises larger doses. Mustard is applied to the throat, interior and exterior, and the patient is "kept up" by stimulants. In other cases tar and bella donna are given. The homeopathic plan, as already stated, finds more favor, chiefly on the ground that the doses are less frequent and bulky, and the horse is less worried by the treatment. A singular phase of the disease is the indiscriminate character of its victims, no precautions of room, light or ventilation being proof against it. Preventives of every kind have been tried, but, so far, with but moderate success. In a fashionable Fifth-avenue livery and boarding stable a small quantity of sulphate of iron thrown into the water-trough has operated successfully as a preventive, and in this and other places prompt treatment of all suspicious cases has thus far been proof against the inroads of the epidemic.

The leading street railroad and stage lines half prostrated and laid up yesterday, the aggregate of which 1,220 were affected by the epidemic, and 624 so badly attacked as to be unable to leave their stalls, thus causing the hauling off of thirty-one cars and sixteen stages. This is a moderate statement, compiled from actual figures, and does not include many of the less important cross-town lines, which have suffered in proportion. Up to noon yesterday not one of these cases had terminated fatally, and, in some instances, signs of improvement were manifested.

The "hospital" branches of every car-stable in the City are filled, and in many cases the affected animals are kept in their usual stalls from lack of accommodations elsewhere, which, it may be as well to mention, is not regarded as dangerous to the unaffected animals, as the disease is not believed to be infectious.

Of the 1,800 horses of the Third-avenue line, nearly 400 are affected, but only 26 are altogether out of the yoke. In the stables of the branch of this line, running to the Grand Central Depot, 18 of 140 horses are laid up.

The Fourth-avenue line yesterday had 40 out of sixty-six of its horses being disabled, while over 300, or a third of the entire number in the stables, were affected.

In the Sixth-avenue stables, comprising 900 horses, no less than 156 were in the hospital, while at many other stables quite a number were on the road. Yesterday twelve cars were withdrawn, and more will be taken off today, unless the malady abates.

At the depot of the Broadway and Seventh-avenue line, five per cent, or 65, of the horses were laid up. While over 100 were slightly affected.

The epidemic does not appear to have made much headway among the stock of the Eighth-avenue line, where, out of 1,120 horses, only thirteen are actually unable to work. Others are affected, but as the malady did not appear at the stables until yesterday, the running of the cars is not interfered with.

The Ninth-avenue line runs on time, only seven of its 207 horses being laid up, although the symptoms are visible in many of those on the road.

The Belt line suffers so badly that no less than ten cars have been withdrawn. The epidemic appeared there yesterday morning, and by 3 P. M. sixty-five horses, or nearly seven per cent, were in hospital.

In the stables of the Grand-street and Forty-second-street line the epidemic appears pretty universal, although no horses had been withdrawn from the road up to 3 P. M. yesterday.

The stage companies appear to have fared worse than their rivals of the rail, each line having found it necessary to reduce its running force. The Madison-avenue line suffers badly, seven stages having been withdrawn yesterday, which, with the five taken off on Tuesday, reduce the usual number of vehicles by twelve. All the horses here are more or less affected, about 105, or twenty-five per cent, being off the road. The Broadway and Fifth-avenue line is nearly as badly attacked, although the epidemic exists here in a milder form. The usual number of stages run, making, however, six trips daily instead of seven.

About two-thirds of the horses of the Broadway and Fourth-avenue line show symptoms, and thirty-eight are off the road. Four stages were withdrawn yesterday, and the remainder made six trips instead of eight.

Should the epidemic show no abatement, further retrenchments will be necessary, and at the present rate a week would be sufficient to stop three-fourths of the cars and stages of the City, besides impeding, if not blocking, altogether, all in any way depending on horse power. The livery and boarding and private stables are all affected in proportion, and a careful estimate places the number of animals in this City unfitted for work at between 4,000 and 5,000, while probably as many more are more or less affected.

The veterinary surgeons define the epidemic variously, but all agree that its origin is traceable to some unusual atmospheric influence. A veteran horse dealer from Rochester, stated to the reporter yesterday that in his thirty years' experience he had seen hundreds of cases, but not one of which had resulted fatally. He gave it as his opinion that the disease was a mild form of lung fever.

Dr. R. M. Jones, City Sanitary Inspector, yesterday, directed Dr. Leotard, the veterinary surgeon of the Board of Health, to make an investigation in regard to the disease now prevailing in this City, and report the result of his examination at the next meeting of the Board. Dr. Leotard will take special pains to discover whether the disease is contagious as merely epidemic. Dr. Stephen Smith, City Commissioner, is also busily engaged in making an examination of the railroad stables, and is of the opinion that the disease is not contagious. He thinks it is a sort of influenza, attacking the chest and lungs, and generally proving fatal in a few hours after the first attack.

In the stable of the Adams Express Company about seventy horses are laid up. The United States Express Company, and other express companies, are also sufferers to a great extent.

At Duffy's livery-stable in Eighteenth-street, near First-avenue, eighteen horses are said to be affected with the disease. At the stables of the New-York Gas Company, thirty horses, out of a stock of thirty-five, are suffering with it. Last night the stablemen were fumigating the stables by the burning of tar. At Sherwood's stables in Nineteenth-street, near Avenue A, six horses are affected.

The Epidemic in Brooklyn.

The Fulton-avenue car stables contained nearly 250 sick horses yesterday, a considerable number of which were altogether unable to work. Four cars were taken off, reducing the trips by thirty, and unless the disease abates the further reduction will be necessary. All the other car stables, besides a number of private stables, are affected in proportion.

The Epidemic in Jersey City.

The horse disease, which has existed in the Eastern States and in New-York, has reached Jersey City. On Tuesday and yesterday probably half the horses in the City were sick. Many of them were still at work, and very few of them were laid up. In the Adams Express Company's stables, Colgrath & Co.'s, Godfrey's, and the Jersey City and Bergen Street Railway Company's stables, almost all the horses were ill. One passenger car, also, on the road made its appearance without his horse. Deaths, of course, in fatal cases, were likely to occur, and the authorities immediately ordered the fitting up of additional hospital accommodations, so that the horses may be properly cared for.

Effect of the Epidemic on Other Sections of the Country.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 22.—The horse disease continues its ravages, and there are not a score of horses in the city and neighborhood unaffected, although very few fatal cases have been reported. Rain began falling yesterday afternoon and continued up to 2 o'clock this morning, and during that time a horse in the streets was a rare sight. It is believed the weather aggravates the disease. All branches of business are more or less affected by the scarcity of horses. The merchants are put to great expense in hiring men and boys to transport goods. The street cars are not running, the livery-stables are closed, and it looks like Sunday in the streets. The people from the country reach the city by steam, and trade is lively. The disease prevails in the surrounding country as extensively as in the city. It is stated that only in cases in which bleeding has been resorted to have the horses died.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Oct. 23.—Careful inquiries at the livery stables in this city and at the street-car stables fail to show that the horse disease has reached Poughkeepsie. Three horses died at Hyde Park last night and today from, it is alleged, eating Western corn and oats. They were taken suddenly with blowing, and died within an hour.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 22.—The horse epidemic has broken out in this city and is spreading rapidly. Fully 500 horses are affected, including the horses of the Fire Department and street railways, and owing to the sickness of the latter the running time of the cars have been changed. It is feared that the cars will be stopped altogether shortly. The horses of the Milk Company are affected; also 100 private horses, and a number have already died.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Oct. 22.—The horse epidemic still prevails largely in this city and vicinity. There are upward of seventy horses sick in the public stables. One horse died last night. Thus far, so yet, no abatement of the epidemic seems probable.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 22.—Seventy cases of the horse disease broke out in this city today. No fatal cases have been reported thus far.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 22.—The horse epidemic is seriously impeding business and travel here, but so far very few horses have died from it.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 22.—Numerous letters have been received at the Treasury Department on the subject of the horse disease, one of which, dated Buffalo, says: it is so widespread that the writer is safe in placing nine-tenths of the horses in that city and neighborhood as affected by the disease, and, he adds, while it is regarded as dangerous, it yields readily to treatment, if applied in season. The general impression is that it is not contagious but is epidemic. The Secretary of the Treasury has issued the following instructions to the collectors at Rochester, Buffington, Cape Vincent and Port Huron: "You are directed, so long as the existing horse disease prevails in Canada, to allow no horses to be brought into your port or district from that country, unless you are perfectly satisfied that they are free from contagious disease."

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Oct. 22.—The managers of the city passenger railways and others owning horses have become considerably excited in regard to the horse disease. No case, however, has as yet made its appearance.

The Disease in Rochester—It Comes from Canada.

From the Rochester Express, Oct. 22.

The Canada horse epidemic prevails to a considerable extent in this city; but there is no occasion for alarm, for the disease is easily managed when fully understood. The great majority of the horses in this city and the surrounding towns are affected by it. The street railway cars have been hauled off, and the public must bear with the inconvenience a few days. The animals are all sick, but getting along finely. None have died in that stable or in the city, so far as we have learned, since our last report. Most of the livery-stables are closed, the proprietors thinking it best to keep their horses quiet and under treatment until they recover. Butcher-boy men appeared on the streets this morning, and the public stands are nearly deserted. There is great difficulty in obtaining horses and carriages for funerals. Horses in private barns throughout the city are more or less affected. There are livery horses in town today, and we notice that nearly all their horses have the first symptoms—running at the nostrils, harsh cough, &c. On inquiry we found that many of these animals had not been in the city for several weeks, showing that the disease is not contagious. The veterinary surgeons are busy night and day. They report most cases mild, and their remedies are having the desired effect. The majority are incapacitated for work, but those slightly affected can be used in light work without injurious effects. The epidemic has affected the cart-mares and a majority have suspended work. Nearly all the horses of the express companies are sick, but goods are delivered as usual. The epidemic seriously interferes with all branches of business in the city, but we believe it will not long continue, as the best care is taken of the animals subject to its attack. The veterinary surgeons advise horse owners to take extra precautions and not let their horses work any more than is absolutely necessary. It is a remarkable fact that so far the canal horses have not caught the disease. No cases have occurred at the stables in the City. The canal men use, as a preventive, on the pits, tar and assafœtida.

The Disease in Buffalo—Its Subsidence in Toronto.

From the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, Oct. 22.

It is doubtless a fact that those of our readers who passed through the principal streets yesterday and today, noticed the wonderful lack of horses and vehicles, a fact which proves that the horse epidemic is still raging in a manner unparalleled. The railroads notify business houses that they must cart their own freight from the depots; the Street-railroad Company are seriously embarrassed, and will have to suspend operations if the disease continues; the express companies are in a bad fix, while the business of livery-stable keepers, hackmen, carmen, and teamsters generally is almost entirely suspended. The veterinary surgeons are very busy and work incessantly. The epidemic is, in fact, a great calamity, and the business interests of the city will suffer materially if it continues.

We received a call this morning from Dr. William Somerville, the well-known veterinary surgeon of this city, who has just returned from Toronto, where he has been to investigate the disease, its duration and termination. Dr. Somerville called upon Dr. Smith, of the Veterinary College, who informed him that the disease first broke out in Toronto three weeks ago last Friday. Within a day or two Dr. Smith had about fifty cases, and three or four days later it was raging throughout the whole country. The streets of Toronto were deserted at one time, and business generally was suspended. Dr. Somerville ascertained that the duration of the attack is from seventy to thirty days, and in light cases the animal recovers sooner. On a post-mortem examination of the disease in the dissecting-room of Dr. Smith, it was found that the mucous surfaces of the trachea were highly inflamed, and that the disease extended to the lungs, thus producing congestion and death.

Views of Correspondents on the Question.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Having seen a statement of the epidemic now prevailing among the horses in this City, and having had considerable experience in similar diseases at the South, I venture to suggest the following mode of treatment: Let the horse be put into a comfortable stable. Warm flax seed tea, with a little spirits of nitre, for drink. Keep the bowels in a regular state by simple saline, or gentle aloetic purges. Rub the throat and windpipe, from the under jaw to the breast, with a liniment of opodeldoc and spirits of turpentine.

If there is difficulty in urinating, or a dry skin and fever, apply a warm poultice of cornmeal boiled, to the whole flank, by means of an old sheet tied over the loins. The best food is a bran of boiled carrots, with corn-meal stirred in. If there is much discharge from the nose, the nostrils must be sponged out with warm water. It will be found beneficial, also, to cut the horse's head, at times, over a tub of boiling water, so that he can inhale the vapor. Last, he must be allowed to lie down in a comfortable bed of saw-dust or straw. He must be regularly rubbed and carried; and if his legs are cold they must be washed with warm water and rubbed dry. A horse with inflammation of the lungs refuses to lie down. Hence the barbarous practice of tying them up. But where the membranes of the trachea, or of the air cells, is alone affected—as, I surmise, in the case in this complaint—rest, comfort and sleep are as necessary to the horse as to the human being. Very respectfully, J. HUME SIMONS, M. D.

NEW-YORK, No. 30 John-street.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In reading recently in an old English magazine, an account of a disease then prevailing among cattle, I find that a remedy had been tried with much success, viz., tar water. I hope that the same may be tried on the great number of horses which have been attacked with sickness. It can do no harm, and may save many valuable horses. The recipe for making it is about one quart of tar to four quarts of water; stir it well, and, after being settled, pour off the liquid. This can be tried again the same way. A. HOUSE.

THE MAYORALTY.

Hon. Wm. F. Havemeyer Declares His Position.

The Republican County Convention—Letters of Acceptance from Messrs. Havemeyer and Van Vorst—Peter Cooper's Address to the Citizens.

The Republican County Convention met last evening, pursuant to adjournment, at Republican Hall, Twenty-third-street and Broadway. Mr. Thomas Murphy, presided. Mr. Hugh Gardiner said that the Committee of Twenty-one had as yet been unable to complete their labors; they had held a prolonged session the previous evening with the Committee of Seventy, and everything promised to be harmonious and satisfactory. The ticket would be completed on Friday, and he should move that when the Convention adjourn it be till Monday evening. The Committee would then be able to come before the Convention with a ticket which would be satisfactory to all, and prove the earnestness of the Republican Party of this City in the cause of reform. The motion was adopted unanimously.

Gen. Arthur asked for other reports from the Committee, when the following letters were read, as having been sent and received:

NEW-YORK, Oct. 21, 1872.

Hon. William F. Havemeyer:

SIR: We are charged by the Republican County Convention with the agreeable duty of informing you that that body has unanimously nominated you for Mayor, and of requesting your acceptance of that nomination.

In making this communication, we may be permitted to say that the Convention was quite aware that you have not heretofore acted with the Republican Party, and that you would not, if elected, be the Mayor of that party. But the Republicans of this City desire to give their support to the cause of reform, and they believe that they can do this most efficiently by casting their sixty thousand votes for the man whom public sentiment has so unmistakably selected as the exponent of reform.

If you shall accept the nomination, we pledge to you the faithful, earnest and undivided support of all the polls of the great party which we represent.

THOMAS MURPHY,
Chairman of the Republican County Convention.
JOSEPH C. PECKHAM, } Secretaries.
BENJAMIN PAGE, }

NEW-YORK, Oct. 22, 1872.

DEAR SIR: I feel highly complimented by the receipt of your communication tendering me in behalf of the Republican County Convention, the nomination as its candidate for Mayor at the approaching election.

It is rare in our political history that so great and influential an organization is found willing to subordinate its distinctive characteristics, and merge itself, for the occasion, with the patriotic citizens of all political sentiments in efforts to elevate and purify our Municipal Government, and to remove from place and power those who have dishonored it.

It is but just and right that to this great object, and to this most important end, all good citizens should direct their attention and lend their united and zealous co-operation.

If placed in the chair of the Mayoralty, my best efforts will be directed to give effect to these views, and to add to the material greatness and prosperity of our City the reputation of a just and honorable government.

With the request that you will communicate to the body you represent my high appreciation of its generous and patriotic action, I remain, your obedient servant, WM. F. HAVEMEYER.

To Hon. Thomas Murphy, Chairman of the Republican County Convention.

NO. 10 WEST FORTY-SIXTH-STREET, }
NEW-YORK, Oct. 23, 1872. }

To Messrs. Thomas Murphy, and others:

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 18th instant, informing me of my nomination, by the Republican County Convention, for the office of Judge of the Superior Court of the City of New-York.

The office of Judge is so exalted, the interests committed to his charge are so momentous, and the good and honest administration of the laws is so essential to the well-being of society, that any one may well fear to step into such a position with hesitation, arising from a distrust of his own capabilities, as well and truly fulfill its duties.

The Convention which you represent having, however, seen fit to confer upon me this nomination, in accepting it, I can only say that I hold such an office to be the highest aim and ambition of any honorable lawyer; and, if elected, I will use my best endeavors to attain to the ideal which I have formed, and to sustain, as far as I can, the high reputation which has been given to the Superior Court by the eminent jurists who have occupied its bench.

I beg to remain, truly yours, &c.,

HOOPER C. VAN VORST.

The reading of the letters was received with enthusiastic applause, and there being no more business to do, the Convention adjourned.

Another Letter from Mr. Havemeyer.

Mr. Havemeyer has addressed the following letter to Peter Cooper, Esq., and his associates, representing the different Reform Associations of the City, who nominated Mr. Havemeyer for Mayor on Tuesday:

NEW-YORK, Oct. 23, 1872.

GENTLEMEN: I have received your communication tendering me, in behalf of the United Reform Associations of this City, which you represent, their nomination for the Mayoralty at the ensuing election.

I do not fail to appreciate the very kind and complimentary allusion to my connection with the great movement for Municipal reform that now so deeply agitates the whole public mind.

As I have already stated, in accepting the nomination of the various German and other Reform organizations, it is on account of this connection alone that I am induced to entertain the thought of again occupying the position of a candidate for the high office with which you associate my name.

To aid in the great object of restoring to the people of this City the right of self-government and the establishment of uprightness, efficiency and economy in our Municipal affairs, I accept the nomination of the organizations you represent, and beg you to tender them my thanks for the honor, with the hope that all the good results we have a right to expect from the work we have undertaken may be realized.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. F. HAVEMEYER.

To Messrs. Peter Cooper, Meyer Stern, W. R. Vermilye, Cornelius F. Timpson, John H. White, Henry Clews, H. A. Stansbury, John Bathgate, Francis J. Gets, Charles E. Marshall, W. E. Dodge, Charles M. Hall, Secretary United Reform Association; John Foley, President Union Reform Committee, and S. V. R. Cooper.

Peter Cooper's Address.

The following address has been issued by Mr. Peter Cooper:

FELLOW-CITIZENS: Impelled by an inexpressible desire to do all that is possible to secure to my native City men of capacity and integrity for the public offices, I venture again to urge you to rise superior to every unworthy party consideration, and to meet the present crisis in our City and national affairs with your best convictions and most independent action.

We must ever remember that we cannot place incompetent or bad men in office without suffering, personally and individually, the intolerable abuses to which such men give rise. A popular Government, like ours, should be a reflection of the best judgment and virtue of the people. How degraded, then, is one, as independent voters, that men of corrupt principles or incompetent powers should be put into offices which are not only the free gift of the people, but the only means of protecting their rights and securing their prosperity. We want good men in office, and "all other things will be added to us." All special, sectoral and class legislation will thus be done away, and only such general laws will be enacted as may secure any individual or corporation that may choose to place themselves under the protection of the law, to pursue any industry or do anything that the law allows.

I do long to see the day, but I am afraid I shall not live to see it; and yet you, my younger brethren, may see it, and even bring it about—when in every hall of legislation, and over every speaker's chair, shall be written, as it were "in letters of light," "Thou every act of the Legislature should establish justice and promote the general welfare."

Our Fathers understood this thing well—none better; and never was this principle of equal justice better expressed than in the world of the Declaration, so often quoted but so little regarded by our modern Legislatures, "That all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain, inalienable rights—that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; and, to secure these rights Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed." This principle goes back to the root of all popular government. As champions and supporters of this Declaration, in the very phraseology of our Constitution, given the true spirit and test of the Constitution itself. It is therefore the sum of every article in it, "this and no other, or else," the good of God, commanded, and taken upon their canons them," so, in the hour of pride and selfish interest came also the evil spirit among our fathers in the framing of the Constitution. Compromises thus established, and protected the evil of slavery among us were adopted, instead of cutting it up "root and branch," as the logic of free institutions required, and the "times demanded and prosperity of the people commanded. And ever since that time, yet lasting when the divisions of party in this country, no matter what honest differences of opinion have arrayed men into different political connections, the sad thing that the people at large have had to contend with is the pride, the selfishness and the corruption that has crept in among their temporary rulers. This is the only thing that requires vigilance and personal effort on the part of every voter. Questions of tariff or free trade, gold or paper currency, banks or no banks, are settled by great commercial and social laws, over which individuals have little control.

But the honest administration of the Government must be looked to by every person who has a vote, and has only be secured by voting for honest men, no matter to what party they may belong. As long as I believed that the old Democratic Party were acting in harmony with the great principles of public justice declared by our fathers, I was proud to act with that party. But when a large section of them went over to the slave power, and finally levied war upon our continent country by arms at the South, and factious opposition in the North, then in common with other war Democrats, I joined the party for the country. We, the people, placed that party in power without regard to the old party lines or party ties. Let us do so still. I believe that contest is not yet over. I believe the country is still in danger from those who once levied war against it with bullets, and who now seek to overthrow it with ballots. The party that saved this country is still in power. Let us support that party. The men who nearly ruined this City financially, and who acted like public robbers in the people's trust, are not yet all cast thrown. Their spirit and their measures still threaten us. Let us not forget them at the polls, whatever may be their new professions. In conclusion, I will quote a few remarks from an address I made in Tammany Hall more than twenty years ago. They express my convictions now as they did then, and I find that time has not lessened their necessity: "We are possessed of one of the greatest blessings that ever fell to the lot of men—the privilege of carrying on the Government of our choice. With this blessing we have been intrusted by the Providence of God, not only for ourselves, but for the cause of suffering humanity. As a nation we have become a city set on a hill. Our example is seen of all men.

This sacred trust imposes on us a solemn responsibility—an imperious duty, to use our best judgment in the selection of the men who shall administer this Government. If we, as a people, become corrupt, we shall be turned out from our free institutions as unworthy of so rich a possession. Fellow-citizens, I urge you by every consideration of private duty and public interest, to be true to yourselves in the coming election, and to put no man in office that has not proved himself, by public services done in time past, both competent and honest in the service of the people. PETER COOPER.

The Reformatory Movement in the Fifth and Eighth Wards.

The appeal made last Sunday by Rev. A. Wiswall, of St. John's Church, in regard to reforming and improving the condition of the poor classes in the Fifth and Eighth Wards, has already received a generous response. The merchants and residents of that part of the City are contributing money to defray the expenses of the reform movement, so that success seems reasonably secure. Mr. Wiswall yesterday received and acknowledge the following sums for the St. John's Fund.

Rogers, the Condemned Murderer.

Henry Rogers, who was on Tuesday convicted of the murder of Officer John Donohue and sentenced to death, occupies the condemned cell in the County Jail, the same cell in which Skidmore, the air-gun murderer, committed suicide. None but his most intimate friends are permitted to see him. He still protests that he did not intend to kill Donohue, and says he never would have struck the blow had he not been urged to do it by others. He exhibits an appreciation of his terrible situation, and frequently sheds tears while speaking on the subject.

Trial of Martin Kerrigan for the Murder of His Wife—Convicted of Manslaughter.

Martin Kerrigan was tried yesterday, in the Queens County Court of Oyer and Terminer, at North Hempstead, for the murder of his wife, on July 3. It appeared, from the evidence, that after a difficulty in the morning he went to his work. Returning about 6 P. M., as his wife was sitting on the stoop in front of their house, he kicked her off it, then seized her by the arm and dragged her about thirty feet and stamped upon her prostrate body. After this he mounted upon her face, and, in a drunken rage, he returned and again dragged the woman nearly fifty feet further, repeating the stamping. The woman died shortly after. The defense asserted that Kerrigan found his wife intoxicated when he returned, and consulted the deed under the influence of liquor. The prisoner had been in the habit of beating his wife. The jury, after being out all night, brought in a verdict of manslaughter in the second degree. Kerrigan will be sentenced this morning.

NEW-YORK AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

The fourth annual fair of the Rose Memorial Chapel, No. 416 West Forty-first-street, will take place the latter part of the present month.

Hon. Henry G. Stebbins, President of the Department of Parks, has returned from Europe and resumed the duties of his office.

Commissioner Davenport was busily engaged last evening until a late hour swearing in special deputies who are to act under the United States election law.

Rev. Dr. I. M. Wise, of Cincinnati, will deliver a sermon in the English language at 5½ P. M. today, also in the German language on Sunday morning, 26th inst., at 10½ A. M., in the Norfolk-street Synagogue.

A large meeting of the Episcopal clergy of this City was held last evening in Trinity Chapel, West Eighteenth-street, at which appropriate resolutions were accepted and addresses made in reference to the death of Rev. Dr. Seabury.

Superintendent Thorne, of the Bureau of Street-Cleaning, reports that during the week ending the 19th inst., 369¾ miles of streets were cleaned, and 10,747 loads of ashes and garbage, and 6,237 loads of dirt and sweepings were removed from the City at a cost of $12,064 30.

Commissioner Van Nort, of the Department of Public Works, yesterday opened bids for grading, guttering, &c., in various portions of the City. Bids for paving will be received today. The awards of contracts will not be made for several days.

Marcel Lafiur, French pastry-cook at Delmonico's, Fourteenth-street, was searched on leaving the establishment, Tuesday night, and a chicken, two chops and two beef-steaks were found on his person. He was brought before Justice Cox, at Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, and held for trial.

The following record will show the changes in the temperature yesterday, with the average for the same, as indicated by the thermometer at Dickinson's drug-store, No. 3 Park-row: 3 A. M., 60°; 6 A. M., 60°; 9 A. M., 60°; 12 M., 66°; 3 P. M., 66°; 6 P. M., 60½°; 9 P. M., 60°; 12 P. M., 61°. Average temperature yesterday, 62¼°.

George Parsons, a dealer in toys, fancy goods and fire-works, at No. 13 Park-place, was brought before Commissioner Betts, yesterday, charged with shipping nine cases of fire-works on the steamer Charleston, of the Charleston line, without the marks required by law, to show their dangerous character. The case will be continued today at 1 P. M.

The Fifth Regiment, under the command of Col. Charles S. Spencer, marched down Broadway at 3 P. M. yesterday, and were review at the City Hall by a number of representatives of the Mayor and the Common Council. The regiment presented a splendid appearance. A large number of people gathered on the line of march to witness the parade.

The Commissioners appointed to ascertain the amount to be paid the City by the Second-avenue Railroad, for the extension of the same, met yesterday at No. 52 Chambers-street, but, owing to the absence of necessary witnesses, railroad men and real estate agents, Mr. O'Gorman asked for an adjournment, and the Board adjourned till this morning.

William H. Van Ness, of No. 260 South-street, a watchman on Pier No. 48 East River, on Tuesday night saw Edward Kelly, a well-known dock-rat, steal a pig of iron from the pier, and called by the collector to arrest him, when Kelly drew a knife and stabbed Van Ness severely in the right arm. Van Ness, however, secured Kelly, who, on being arraigned before Justice Scott, at Essex Market, yesterday, was held for trial.

Joseph Ballard, bar-tender in Casey's saloon, corner of Greene and Houston streets, who was in murderous assault on weeks ago by Jim McDonald and Dan Lucey, two of the Houston-street gang, was able to appear at Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, and offer his complaint before Justice Cox, who refused to admit the prisoners to bail, while Ballard's life was in jeopardy. The prisoners, however, got the ruffians bailed in Judge Leonard's Court.

BROOKLYN.

The forty-third anniversary of the Brooklyn Sunday School Union was celebrated Tuesday night at Dr. Cuyler's Church.

An inspection drill of the Fourteenth Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., will take place this evening at the State Arsenal on Portland-avenue.

Yesterday morning a fire occurred in Donslow & Bush's oil factory, on Third-street, near Bond-street, caused by gas escaping from a tank. Loss on building, $3,000; on stock, $4,000; insured for $5,000.

The Police Commissioners, yesterday morning, tried Sergt. Rogers, of the Central Office, for allowing the escape of James Flint, one of the most important witnesses in the Donohue murder case. The Sergeant was exonerated from blame.

The Park Commissioners deny that they have mortgaged the East-side lands to secure loans other than authorized by law. The East-side lands are being improved so they can be sold for a good price. The land cost nearly $600,000, and can be sold for about $2,000,000.

It is stated that of the two thousand horses employed by the Brooklyn City Railroad Company, nearly every one exhibits more or less positive symptoms of the malady known as the horse-disease, though none have died as yet. As a consequence, the number of trips per day on the company's lines have been lessened.
